CLASH OVER MOHR DIVORCE PAPERS

Dover Bombarded by German Aerial Fleet

CURLEY "FIRES" DEER ISLAND MASTER

BRETT OUT; OTHERS TO GO

Mayor Says He Has Not Discussed Shaw's "Resignation;" Tells Secret Trips to Island

Carlton L. Brett, pastor of the Deer Island House of Correction, has resigned, the resignation taking effect tomorrow.

This was announced today by Mayor Curley, and confirms the story printed exclusively in the Sunday AMERICAN yesterday of Brett's resignation.

Asked if Brett's action was voluntary, the Mayor replied:

"No, I requested the resignation."

The Mayor declared that other officials at Deer Island would be "dismissed later."

At the same time there was a report at City Hall that Penal Commissioner David B. Shaw would be asked to resign. To a query as to whether this was true the Mayor said:

"I have not discussed that with Mr. Shaw."

MAYOR'S SECRET TRIPS.

The Mayor told of making two secret trips to Deer Island to get firsthand knowledge of conditions there, the second taking place Saturday afternoon following the climax in recent revelations and scandals in connection with the House of Correction. As a result of his visits the Mayor said he had recommended wholesale changes in the food served the prisoners.

He told of one girl prisoner at the Island whose stomach had so rebelled at the foods served her that she had grown into a "veritable shadow."

Even more sensational was his statement vindicating the testimony a few days ago in the Superior court of James Maxwell, a three-year prisoner at the Island, who was tried and found guilty of assaulting Officer Joseph Daley of the jail.

The Mayor said Maxwell had told the truth in his testimony of food conditions at the Island.

The Mayor said he had made recommendations in regard to the serving of fish at the Island. Some time ago the Finance Commission scored Commissioner Shaw, saying fish for the jail was bought from a company of which Shaw's brother is a member, and that the buying was done without advertising for bids.

Fish, formerly served four times a week under Shaw's commissionership, has now been cut to two days a week; granulated sugar is to be used instead of molasses, and the use of cocoa shells for a beverage has been abolished.

Asked by an AMERICAN reporter why he had requested Brett's resignation, Mayor Curley said:

"I prefer not to do that."

"Will you state your reasons, or if there were any charges preferred to yourself against Brett?"

"I will leave that to your imagi-

Secretary Lansing said today that as soon as final word was received from Austria on the Persia he would cable Ambassador Morgenthau to obtain a statement from the Turkish government.

Austria's final reply on the Persia is reported in press dispatches to have been given to Ambassador Penfield, and it is believed to be on the way here now.

'L' TRAINS HELD BY DRAWBRIDGE ACCIDENT

Charlestown Elevated trains were put out of commission the entire morning today because of an accident to the Charlestown bridge draw after it had been opened for the regular 9 o'clock interval.

Failure of the jacks to work kept the draw suspended over the river. Thousands of patrons of the Elevated took surface lines from Sullivan square and City square for Boston over the Warren street bridge. Elevated service on the Boston side continued uninterrupted via Atlantic avenue.

At 9:10 the huge draw as usual swung to midstream to allow waiting vessels to go on their course to and from the Mystic River docks. After all craft had passed through the difficulties in closing the draw were experienced.

Thousands of commuters were delayed getting in to work.

AIR RAIDS ON MANY FRONTS

Kaiser's New Machines Menace England; Monastir Target of Allies; French Attack on Metz

London, Jan. 24.—Aerial warfare has been reopened against England by the Germans.

Aerial activities of the past two days include a German raid on England's coast, a French raid on Metz, where the palace of the Bishop was hit by a bomb; other French raids on points behind the German lines, and returns in kind by the Germans; a French raid on Monastir in Serbia, and a Turkish raid on the Island of Tenedos, where the allies have an encampment.

Gigantic Fokker aeroplanes, the newest war machine created by the Teutons, swept down on the Kentish coast and the port of Dover Saturday night, dropping bombs as they flew.

They attacked the warships in the Channel and attempted to drop bombs upon the vessels, but without success.

The raid is taken here as a prelude to new Zeppelin activity. The last Zeppelin raid was in October, and when the raids were discontinued there were reports from Germany that a giant air fleet, consisting of both planes and Zeppelins, was in preparation for a decisive blow later.

Now London believes this new raid may come at any time, and the government in the House of Commons has been called upon to answer numerous questions as to the steps taken to meet the new danger.

FOKKER PLANE FEARED.

The Fokker plane has become as much of a bugbear to London as the Zeppelins. Authoritative descriptions say these new planes are heavily armored throughout, carry four machine guns and a bomb-dropping machine with a newly devised sighting apparatus — something heretofore sought for in vain—and have engines capable of 700 horsepower, and from 110 to 180 miles an hour.

The Fokker palnes have been tried out along the battle front with considerable success. That they are now aimed at England is taken as indication that they have been perfected to the satisfaction of the Germans.

Harold Tennant, speaking for the Government in Parliament, said today:

"During the last four weeks, England has lost fourteen aeroplanes. The Germans have lost between nine and eleven in that time.

"British aviators carried out six raids and bombardments during the month. The Germans made thirteen raids.

"The British used 183 machines, in-

DISAGREEMENT IN HARVARD VOTE CASE

A disagreement was reported to Judge Raymond at East Cambridge today by the jury which heard the evidence in the trial of Attorney Herbert B. CHARGES OF WIFE READ

Record Admitted as Showing State of Mind in 1914 of Woman Charged With Murder Plot

Providence, Jan. 24.—Divorce papers in the cross-libels filed by Mrs. Elizabeth F. Mohr and her husband, Dr. C. Franklin Mohr, were introduced as evidence into the Mohr murder trial today, after a battle between attorneys for the prosecution and defence.

The papers were offered by the States to show the frame of mind of Mrs. Mohr when they were filed in 1914, but Judge Stearns ruled that counsel could not go into details regarding the various actions.

Intemperance, excessive use of opium, and infidelity were the allegations made by Mrs. Mohr in her suit for separate maintenance and for the custody of the two children. The charges in Dr. Mohr's libel were not read.

Miss Gertrude E. Stevenson, the Boston newspaper woman who claimed to have secured from Brown, Spellman and Healis admissions damaging to Mrs. Mohr, broke down and wept hysterically today after being cross-examined by William H. Lewis, counsel for Brown. He brought out the fact that she had been an inmate of a sanitarium, would go to any lengths to get a story, and was prejudiced against negroes.

Theodore E. Hetlund, a newspaperman, also of Boston, testified he was present when Miss Stevenson secured the interviews with the prisoners, in which they were made to say if Mrs. Mohr would stick by them, they would stick by her. He corroborated her testimony.

Thomas Sharp, a Providence garage proprietor, testified to seeing Brown in his garage at 11:15 on the night of the murder of Dr. Mohr. He testified that Brown came in at that time with his motorcycle.

It is expected that the prosecution will not finish the its case until tomorrow, as Inspector James Ahearn and Chief George H. Monahan, together with several newspapermen, are still to be heard.

The defence will probably open Wednesday or Thursday, with Mrs. Elizabeth F. Mohr as the chief witness for herself.

Brown and Spellman will also take the stand, and Attorneys Lewis and Edwards intimated today that they would be able to produce excellent alibis for the two men.

man, conferred with Judge Stearns. The jury came in at 9:50, looking refreshed after its two days' rest.

Mrs. Mohr came into court looking well. She smiled and bade her counsel and several newspaper men a cheerful "Good morning." She again received several letters from sympathizing friends.

Miss Gertrude E. Stevenson resumed the witness stand for cross-examination by Attorney William H. Lewis, counsel for Victor Brown.

Mr. Lewis walked toward Miss Stevenson and showed her a piece of paper on which a name was written.

Q.—Do you know a person in Boston by that name? A.—Yes, sir.

Attorney-General Rice objected strenuously, and Judge Stearns said to Attorney Lewis:

"That is a very unusual way of examining a witness. I object to you showing anything of that kind to the witness."

Mr. Lewis argued that he was within his rights. After a conference with counsel in this case? A.—Last Friday noon.

Q.—And you did not know till then that you were to testify in this case? A.—I hadn't the slightest idea.

Attorney-General Rice again objected. Judge Stearns he continued his examination:

Q.—Miss Stevenson, when did you first know that you were going to be called on the ground that Attorney Lewis was laying the foundation for another question without first mentioning time and place. Attorney Lewis sharply retorted that he shouldn't be interrupted when within his rights.

Q.—So that you say Friday noon was the first day. Now had you before that time gone over any of your testimony with Mr. Phillips? A.—I hadn't even thought of it.

Q.—Had you taken it up with Chief Robbins? A.—Why, I hadn't thought of it.

Q.—Did you take it up with Attorney-General Rice or Assistant Attorney-General Branch? A.—I never did.

BOSTON WOMAN NAMED.

Do you know where Westland avenue is in Boston? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Do you remember being there in a house October 30? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—I won't ask you who she was, but did you say anything to her about testifying here in this case?

Attorney-General Rice: "Your Honor, he's fishing for——"

"I'm not fishing," snapped Attorney Lewis. "Neither am I fishing in Echo Lake."

Attorney-General Rice and Attorney Lewis then clashed on the point of law, with Judge Stearns deciding in favor of Lewis. Miss Stevenson answered:

"I'm quite sure I said nothing about testifying in this case."

Q.—But you had a conversation there about the Mohr trial, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Didn't you say you were going down there to testify against these negroes?

Attorney-General Rice—Wait—wait a minute!

Attorney Lewis (addressing Rice)—Are you willing that the woman's name should go in?

Miss Stevenson—I don't think it is necessary to bring in the woman's name.

Attorney Lewis: "If Your Honor rules, then I must put in the name.

Judge Stearns: "I see no reason for keeping the name out."

Attorney-General Rice: "There is no secret about it. If it isn't for the purpose of contradicting, it should be put in."

Judge Stearns: "It's one of the penalties of a trial."

Attorney-General Rice: "Well, Your Honor, if it is for the purpose of contradicting, time and place should precede the question."

USE OF "PERSONAL CHARM."

Q.—Didn't you tell Salita Salano that you were going down to testify against the "niggers"? A.—I did not.

Q.—Will did you call them negroes, then? A.—No.

Q.—When you saw Brown, Healis and Spellman did you use your personal charm in order to secure their confidence? A.—The question is absurd. The men are negroes.

Q.—I didn't ask you that. Please try to answer "yes" and "no" when you can. Don't try to have the last word all the time, although I know it is a woman's right. You wanted a story connecting Mrs. Mohr with the murder, so it would be a feature story, didn't you? A.—I only wanted to get at the truth.

Q.—Isn't it a fact, Miss Stevenson, that a story with a woman in it is a far better story? A.—Well, that question could be answered in a great many ways and——

Attorney-General Rice had put in an objection before Miss Stevenson started to reply, and he called out in the loudest tones that he has used throughout the trial:

"Madam, when I object, please stop."

Immediately the Attorney-General turned to the court and said:

"I object to Mr. Lewis' continuous violation of court etiquette. He will not let the witness"——

Q.—Did you ask your questions of Brown or Healis or Spellman?

Attorney General Rice: "Mr. Lewis, when I am making an objection, please refrain from continuing to ask questions."

Attorney Lewis: "If you wouldn't make so many, I could try."

Attorney-General Rice: "If the subject matter wasn't so objectionable, I wouldn't have to protest at every question you put."

Attorney Lewis: "If it is going to be an endurance contest, I'm with you."

At this point, Judge Stearns lost his patience, and told Mr. Lewis to allow the witness answer the question fully and not try to stop her answers in the middle and create a wrong impression.

Q.—Wasn't Mrs. Mary Serpa, the jailer's wife, with you throughout your entire conversation with Brown, Spellman and Healis? A.—No, when I was talking with the three negroes.

Q.—You mean Brown and Spellman and Healis, don't you? A.—Yes, when I was talking to them at first I was alone. Mrs. Serpa came along about ten minutes later.

BROWN'S "ALIBI."

Q.—Was she with you during the second interview? A.—No.

Miss Stevenson was handed a slip of paper on which was written the "alibi" of C. Victor Brown. She identified the paper, but could not recall whose handwriting it was. She was then questioned at length concerning "niggers."

Q.—Did Brown say "Go to my sister, May Daly, at No. 25 Gadsden street, Providence"? A.—Yes.

Q.—You wrote the story of the "Birth of a Nation" didn't you?

Attorney-General Rice objected and was sustained.

Q.—You wrote the story of the "Birth of a Nation" for a newspaper didn't you?

"Wait—wait. Just a minute!" interjected Attorney-General Rice.

Judge Stearns: "I don't see why we should try out that issue."

Q.—Didn't you say in your story of the "BIRTH of a Nation" that the "niggers" were shown up just as they were?

Attorney-General Rice again objected, and was sustained.

Q.—Did Brown say "Go to my sister, May Daly, at No. 25 Gadsden street, Providence"? A.—Yes.

Q.—You wrote the story of the "Birth of a Nation" didn't you?

Attorney-General Rice objected and was sustained.

Q.—You wrote the story of the "Birth of a Nation" for a newspaper didn't you?

"Wait—wait. Just a minute!" interjected Attorney-General Rice.

Judge Stearns: "I don't see why we should try out that issue."

Q.—Didn't you say in your story of the "BIRTH of a Nation" that the "niggers" were shown up just as they were?

Attorney-General Rice again objected, and was sustained.

Q.—Did you ask your questions of Brown or Healis or Spellman?

Attorney General Rice: "Mr. Lewis, when I am making an objection, please refrain from continuing to ask questions."

Attorney Lewis: "If you wouldn't make so many, I could try."

Q.—Did Brown say "Go to my sister, May Daly, at No. 25 Gadsden street, Providence"? A.—Yes.

Attorney-General Rice objected and was sustained.

Judge Stearns: "I don't see why we should try out that issue."

Attorney-General Rice again objected, and was sustained.

Q.—Did you ask your questions of Brown or Healis or Spellman?

Attorney General Rice: "Mr. Lewis, when I am making an objection, please refrain from continuing to ask questions."

Attorney Lewis: "If you wouldn't make so many, I could try."

Q.—It was just a story of yours, wasn't it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Miss Stevenson, you will do anything to get a story, won't you?

Attorney-General Rice objected.

Attorney Lewis: "May it please the court, I am merely trying to bring out some point. I believe it's perfectly competent for me as a matter of law to show the witness's veracity."

Q.—When you go after a story, Miss Stevenson, you generally get it, don't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you did it in the Muenter case? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you double-crossed a young man who was with you on the same story? Did you double-cross him?

Answer inaudible.

Q.—Have you lived in any other place than Boston in the last five years?

Attorney-General Rice objected and a clash between counsel followed, and Attorney Lewis continued:

Q.—Did you ever have any mental trouble? A.—Oh, I thought you meant where I lived. I was in the Adams Nervine Hospital.

Q.—When? A.—From September 14 till January 26, a year ago.

ONCE "NERVE" PATIENT.

Q.—And that's a hospital for treatment of nervous diseases? A.—Yes.

"That's all," said Attorney Lewis.

Assistant Attorney-General Phillips, on re-direct examination, asked the court if he might refer to the defendants as "niggers." Attorney Edwards jumped to his feet and objected, Attorney Lewis asked that the defendants be designated by their names.

Assistant Attorney-General Phillips explained that he thought it would be proper to use the word "niggers," inasmuch as Mr. Lewis had used it. Attorney Edwards continued his strenuous objections and won his point, Attorney Phillips saying:

"Well, we'll specify each by name—Brown, Spellman and Healis."

"Yes, use the names of the defendants," said Judge Stearns.

Q.—When the jailer's wife came up, did they stop talking? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you remember at the second interview if Healis could be seen? A.—He couldn't be seen.

Miss Stevenson left the witness stand hurriedly, and hurried to the corridor. Deputy Sheriff Tillinghast tried to console her and finally one of the woman writers at the trial restored her to calmness.

During recess Miss Stevenson told Attorney Lewis that this method of cross-examination in her case was entirely unnecessary inasmuch as she merely took the stand to tell what she heard and saw, and had no particular axe to grind. Attorney Lewis reminded her that it was "all in a day's work."

HEDLUND TELLS STORY OF INTERVIEW AT THE JAIL

T. E. Hedlund, a Boston newspaper man, then took the stand and testified that he was with Miss Stevenson when she secured her interviews from the three negroes at the Bristol Jail. Mr. Hedlund reiterated all of her testimony on direct examination, and on cross-examination Mr. Lewis brought out the following replies:

Q.—When did you know that you were to take the witness stand? A.—Friday afternoon last.

Q.—You say that your memory is not very clear as to everything that happened during your talk with Brown, Spellman and Healis at the Bristol Jail? A.—That is right.

Hedlund, under cross-examination, told Attorney Lewis he met Miss Stevenson at the jail "purely accidentally." He told of the conversation with the negroes in the jail.

Q.—And she was talking in a very low voice to the boys? A.—Yes.

Hedlund then told of the conversation with Mrs. Serpa, the jailer's wife.

Q.—Where was Mrs. Serpa after that? A.—She was away back, standing close to the wall.

Q.—Could she see and hear you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Could she see Miss Stevenson? A.—Yes.

Q.—Could she hear her? A.—She may have.

Q.—Did she leave that position? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did she go? A.—She came toward us.

The witness here related several conversations which took place between him and Miss Stevenson about the story they were to get.

Q.—You had gone down there to see the boys about the fishermen's story, hadn't you? A.—Yes. There was an agreement with Miss Stevenson by which I was to get all she got. I was to "stall" the jailer.

Q.—You are quite positive you heard nothing about the guns? A.—I didn't hear anything about guns.

Q.—You didn't say at any time to the boys that Mrs. Mohr had sent you to see them, did you? A.—I don't remember. I was a party to everything that took place there.

Q.—Did you know Mr. Sabata of the Providence Tribune? A.—Yes, sir.

Attorney Lewis—"Will Mr. Sabata please stand!"

A short, thick-set, good natured looking man with a black mustache arose in his place at the press table.

Q.—Is that the man you know as Mr. Sabata? A.—Yes, sir.

Assistant Attorney-General Phillips said he would like to ask the witness one question, which was whether he heard the boys make a denial of

PROSECUTION'S BLOWS FALL RELENTLESSLY

By DOROTHY DIX.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 24.—When the "Superior Court of the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations," as the official phrase quaintly puts it, adjourned until today, Mrs. Mohr slumped down against the table in front of her, almost in a state of collapse.

Whether she be innocent or guilty, the strain upon her for the past two weeks has been almost more than a woman of her hysterical temperament could endure.

Day after day she has had to sit quietly by watching the prosecution adroitly and cunningly building up a case against her, whose strength and portent she has begun to sense at last. Moreover, the last session closed with a dramatic coup for which she was unprepared.

In the last few minutes the prosecution called to the witness stand Miss Gertrude Stevenson, a young Boston newspaper woman, who told of an interview she had in the Bristol jail with Mrs. Mohr's three alleged conspirators, which linked her unmistakably with the crime.

HEALIS CRIED OUT.

Miss Stevenson said that when she saw the three negroes in jail she told them that she had just interviewed Mrs. Mohr, and that they asked how Mrs. Mohr was, and if she was sore at them, and then that Healis cried out:

"You tell Mrs. Mohr if she'll stick to us we'll stick to her."

Miss Stevenson then asked the boys why they had confessed, and Spellman pointed to Healis and said that Healis had gotten nervous. Healis retorted: "I did not spill anything until Wednesday." Then Brown and Spellman said that as long as Healis had told, they might as well tell, too.

Miss Stevenson inquired of them if they did not think Miss Burger would tell, and Healis had said: "No, she didn't know anything to tell."

Then Miss Stevenson asked them what about the fishermen who reported that they had seen Brown and Spellman as they went by the lake, and Brown replied that there was nothing to that, because they did not see the fishermen, and they would have seen them if they had been where they said they were.

Brown then asked Miss Stevenson to ask Mrs. Mohr to send him some clothes, and to ask his wife and mother to come to see him, and then finally slipped her secretly a little paper on which was written an alibi that he had fixed up, that he wanted his sister to swear to, saying that he had been at her house at the time of the murder.

Later on Miss Stevenson saw Brown's sister, a timid little woman, who trembled with fright and said that she was afraid to say that Victor had been at her house when he had not been.

Most of the session was taken up with getting before the jury an intimate picture of the home life of the Mohrs, which seems to have been one of perpetual bickerings and brawls.

Servant after servant was put upon the witness stand to tell of the misery and bitterness and strife that made the handsome residence of the doctor less a real home than any peaceful hovel would have been.

HOUSE WAS STRANGE.

The first to tell of this ill-assorted household was a housekeeper by the name of Mueller. She testified that Mrs. Mohr had said to her at the Newport villa that she was through with Dr. Mohr, and did not want to have anything to do with him again, and that she had closed her doors against him for two years.

Miss Mueller said that Mrs. Mohr had declared that Miss Burger had broken up her home, and was the source of all her troubles, and that if she did not watch out she would get two bullets, and that as Mrs. Mohr was leaving the Newport place she had asserted that she would soon be back there.

Miss Mueller had previously told that there was something so strange and uncanny about the atmosphere of the Newport home that it made her afraid, so that some nights she sat up nearly all night filled with nervous apprehension and watched for something to happen, but what this something was she was not permitted to tell.

BUILT UP EVIDENCE.

Another servant testified to the troubles between the Mohrs, and was asked to identify a scrap of paper that had been found in Brown's effects in the garage, after he was arrested, and which showed that Mrs. Mohr had been corresponding with him, but the scrap of paper was ruled out of court.

Still another servant, a Miss Hamm, told how as far back as 1913 Mrs. Mohr had told her that the doctor wanted to make up with her, as it was Christmas Eve, and he thought everyone should be happy at Christmas time, but Mrs. Mohr refused to do so.

Miss Hamm said that Mrs. Mohr refused to speak to the doctor, but used her as a conversation medium, replying to every question of the doctor's and his over-

One Hope for Mrs. Mohr, as Dorothy Dix Sees It

FOR Mrs. Mohr is the sentimental plea that she was was a neglected wife and the loathness of a jury to convict a woman, especially on the testimony of three degenerate negro lads.

Evidently Mrs. Mohr banks largely on this latter supposition, because when she was arrested she said to Constable Wallace: "Oh, nobody will believe a negro. They're all liars."

And on this slender hope hangs her fate.

tures for peace by addressing her replies to the maid, although the doctor was present.

So the day went, tying up the loose ends of evidence, bolstering up in every possible way the story that George Healis had told, and painting, through the testimony of additional witnesses the background of long-nourished hate and jealousy that existed in the Mohr household, and that made almost any tragedy possible.

FATE HANGS ON FIGHT TODAY.

The State's case is almost in. It will end, and then Mrs. Mohr and her two alleged conspirators will begin their fight for freedom.

The State's case has been admirably presented. It could hardly be stronger against the accused than it is. Against Mrs. Mohr are these damning points:

Her frantic jealousy of her husband and of his attentions to other women.

The repeated threats which she had made against him and Miss Burger.

Her letters to Healis, showing terms of intimacy with him.

The facts that Brown visited her and she gave him money, and that Brown was discharged for talking to her.

Healis' evidence against her.

The confession of Brown and Spellman.

For her is the sentimental plea that she was a neglected wife and the loathness of a jury to convict a woman, especially on the testimony of three degenerate negro lads.

Evidently Mrs. Mohr banks largely on this latter supposition, because when she was arrested she said to Constable Wallace: "Oh, nobody will believe a negro. They're all liars."

And on this slender hope hangs her fate.

GIRLHOOD FRIENDS BELIEVE MRS. MOHR CANNOT BE GUILTY

Taunton, Jan. 24.—Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany Mohr, the accused widow, spent her childhood and girlhood days here in Taunton, where every move in the trial is being followed with intense interest. It was here that she lived until she started out to earn her own living in Providence and to gain the acquaintance of the man whose death she is now charged with causing.

Two sisters of Mrs. Mohr, Mrs. Stephen J. Sullivan of West Water street and Mrs. John Crowninshield of East Water street are still living in Taunton. Another sister, Mrs. Eugene Sullivan, lives in New Bedford.

Mrs. Mohr was known to her girlhood chums as "Lizzie Blair," Blair being her maiden name.

These former acquaintances now say:

"That Lizzie Blair was an ordinary, every-day girl in her youth.

"That she suddenly changed, became more independent and high strung until she seemed to hold herself above others of her own station in life.

"That she was tender-hearted to such an extent that even today those who knew her say that she was too tender-hearted to have instigated the crime charged to her."

"That she openly proclaimed her greatest aim in life to be married with a man of wealth and social position.

"That she never kept company with Taunton young men, and while her beauty attracted many, she never allowed local wooers into her good graces.

"That she boasted of her beauty to other counter girls at the store where she was employed.

"That she was very religious and constantly worshiped at the Sacred Heart church, to which, not long ago, she gave in memory of her mother a costly pulpit valued at several thousand dollars."

Mrs. Mohr lived in Taunton up to sixteen years ago. She spent her childhood days in the South End of the city, living with her mother and father. She came to Taunton from Norwich when a young girl. Her mother and father died in Taunton. After leaving school she worked in the Bon Marche, a clothing store. She next went to Providence to work in O'Gorman's department store. When she left Taunton, she told her girl friends that there were no young men here good enough for her and that she was going to seek someone who had wealth.

After she left rumors became current that she was going around with a wealthy Providence physician, and the stories were given credence when she was seen riding in Taunton in an automobile. Next came the announcement of the engagement and later the marriage. While her intimate friends here knew of her aims to marry a man of wealth, still they were surprised to think that one so religious would marry a divorced man.

The marriage caused no little gossip in Taunton. She came here occasionally to visit her relatives. Only a short time ago her niece was married here, and the style in which Mrs. Mohr came to the wedding caused no mild sensation here. She appeared, richly gowned, in a huge limousine, accompanied by a colored chauffeur, a footman in livery and a maid. More gossip was caused later when Mrs. Mohr's brother, Joseph Blair, died, and she failed to appear at the funeral.

Mrs. Mohr Throws Off Cares for Sake of Her Children

Mrs. Futrelle Finds Woman on Trial Enjoying Relaxation from Tense Strain of Court.

By MRS. JACQUES FUTRELLE.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 24.—I dropped in for a few moments' chat with Mrs. Elizabeth Frances Mohr Sunday afternoon, and I found that the day had been literally a day of rest for her.

She had tried to let her cares slip like a mantle from her courageous shoulders, and the peacefulness of her expression told me that she had succeeded.

I know she has made this effort for the sake of the children as well as her own health, because they have been plying of late for the dear, smiling mother they have been accustomed to having with them.

I found almost a repetition of the happy family I left the evening before, with the two beautiful children in their nighties listening to their mother read "bedtime stories" for the first time in ever so long.

It is the first time since the trial began two weeks ago that she has had more than a casual moment for her house and her family—respite from the long, weary days in the courtroom and hours spent in consultation with her attorneys.

ENJOYS DAY OF RELAXATION.

As the situation at the beginning of her third week of trial appeared rather bright for her, she could relax. She went to mass at the Cathedral in the early morning, listened to the two children practice their music, and then for a long motor ride in the afternoon with friends.

The day was a beautiful, sunshiny one, a cool, clear Winter day—a day when it was a joy to be outdoors. It was as if a thoughtful weather man had ordered the day especially for Mrs. Mohr, and she took advantage of it.

It was a joyous day, too, for the children, Master Charles and Virginia, for they had their mother all day, giving them two days in succession in her dear company, and they spent most of the time with their little arms around her neck.

Even "Teddy," the Irish terrier, was excited over the event, and insisted upon licking Mrs. Mohr's face at the slightest opportunity. Once when she scolded him for his familiarity he cocked one ear and looked at her with such an aggrieved expression that she relented and patted him affectionately.

"Poor old Teddy," she said to him, "do you miss me, too?"

Teddy snorted and bobbed his head in answer, and I am sure he knew what had been asked of him.

Mrs. Mohr came in from her motor ride with her cheeks glowing. She has been pale of late, confined as she is to the courtroom and deprived of her usual exercise. She does not walk these days because she wishes to avoid all publicity and the stares of the idly curious.

Mrs. Mohr's patience and endurance have been remarkable when one takes into consideration what she is going through day by day. The drawn look about her mouth has disappeared, and it is evident that she is now more hopeful than she has ever been of going forth from the courtroom finally a free woman.

She had many beautiful flowers sent her. Many of these came from persons she does not know, but brought a line of sympathy for her and an appreciation of her courage. They made a cheerful bit of color in the old-time living room.

HAS MANY WELL-WISHERS.

"You can't imagine how much they help me," Mrs. Mohr said. "Everyone has been so kind to me. And besides all this kindness from strangers, I never before knew I had so many good friends. It is at a time like this, too, when one learns the meaning of true friendship."

Miss Ella Hennon, Mrs. Mohr's favorite niece, who is staying with her during the trial, is kept busy trying to acknowledge the letters that come in every mail. There are hundreds of these letters, not only from towns and cities in Rhode Island, but all over New England, and even all over the United States.

Some of the letters that come to Mrs. Mohr bear the postmark of many Middle West cities. All express an admiration for her courage and the hope that she will soon be free.

RELATIVES LOYAL TO WIDOW.

Mr. Augustus Mohr and his sister, Mrs. Ella Hogan, from McEwensville, the brother and sister of the slain physician, are also the guests of Mrs. Mohr. They have come to Providence to do all in their power to help liberate her.

Their attitude is deep affection for their murdered brother's wife, and they consider the charge against her of her complicity in his death absurd.

Mr. Mohr took a long walk during the afternoon through Roger Williams Park and watched the skaters that thronged the ice.

"Looks pretty bright for Elizabeth," he said to me, and he smiled his charming smile.

Master Charles confided to me that he thought he'd be allowed to practice on his bugle soon. He also showed me a new camera which just now threatens to rival the bugle in his affections.

He coaxed his mother to pose for him a moment on her way to the motor, then he snapped his friends and Teddy, which consumed the film, so that he could have it developed immediately. He's a young man of action, is Master Charles, and when he wants a thing he wants it without any delay.

VIRGINIA BUSY WITH DOLLS.

Miss Virginia was considerably occupied all the afternoon with her large family, especially the member that's just been dismissed from the repair hospital with a broken head mended and one eye put in as good as new.

The invalid was a bit fretful, but my visit cheered her considerably, so the little mother told me, and I was glad I could at least do that much. All the others of the doll family were quite well, thank you, and charmed with the beautiful day.

They were in high good humor because the little mother had on her beautiful dress with the Irish crochet and the pink sash. Needless to say, she was more charming than ever, if such a thing is possible.

Notwithstanding all she has gone through the strain of these last two weeks, Mrs. Mohr will face her third week of trial with greater courage than she brought into the courtroom that memorable first day. She thinks it is only a question of time now until she will be vindicated before the world.

an, I dare say that she is more justified in killing the person who has wrecked her life than are the soldiers who are killing each other in the trenches without reason," said the Rev. Frederick E. Heath, assistant pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, in a sermon on "Who Killed Dr. Mohr?"

He said:

"The trial in Providence has forced many great and significant questions on us, both social and moral.

"Perhaps the first question we ought to ask is why was the crime committed? I will not attempt to say who perpetrated the murder. It is not well for us to go ahead of the court in this matter.

"Yet it certainly does appear that a network of evidence is being woven around one person. I do not believe that she will be convicted. If she is it will only be a light sentence, because of strong human sympathy for her.

"Of course, we know nothing of the reasons for the deed. Dr. Mohr is not here to tell his side of the story. He may have been a most miserable wretch and guilty of all they say in his professional and private life. But he is dead and cannot tell what transpired in his home, so it is not for us to speak.

MOHR DIVORCE PAPERS ADMITTED AT TRIAL

their story. Attorney Lewis objected, and the court ruled the question out.

Thomas Sharp of No. 6[illegible] Tuttle street, Providence, next testified.

He said he knew Victor Brown and saw him in his Sharpley alley in Trinity square at 11:15 the night of August 31. Witness testified that Brown came there that night on his motorcycle and left it there.

Q—Have you a record of that motorcycle number in your book? A.—Yes.

Attorney Lewis then took the witness in hand for cross-examination and looked at the record book produced by the witness.

Q.—Had Mr. Brown put his motorcycle there before that evening? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did you first have your attention called to this case? A.—A week after the shooting took place.

Q.—How long was it after? A.—Three or four weeks ago.

Assistant Attorney-General Phillips brought out from the witness that a police inspector called to see him the night after the shooting concerning the motorcycle used by Brown.

Q.—Is that entry in the book made by you? A.—Yes.

Q.—So that you refresh your memory by an entry not made by you? A.—I was there that night when the entry was made.

Q.—Will you say you looked at a clock at 11:15 the night Brown came, and will you say you can remember that after four months after? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where did you first have your attention called to this case? A.—A week after the shooting took place.

Q.—How long was it after? A.—Three or four weeks ago.

Assistant Attorney-General Phillips brought out from the witness that a police inspector called to see him the night after the shooting concerning the motorcycle used by Brown.

MOHR DIVORCE PAPERS ARE ADMITTED AS SHOWING FACT

Robert Hoot, court clerk, was then sworn by Judge Stearns. He testified that it is his duty to keep the court record. Howard that papers had been filed by attorneys representing Dr. Charles Franklin Mohr against his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth F. Mohr in divorce proceedings. Another libel was filed by Mrs. Elizabeth F. Mohr against her husband.

Attorney-General Rice asked that the divorce papers which were produced in court be marked as exhibits.

Attorney-General Rice, also representing Mrs. Mohr, objected to the divorce papers being accepted as exhibits on the ground that their contents had not been read, and that there were statements in the papers which had not been corroborated in several instances.

Attorney-General Rice contended that his object in having the divorce papers of Mrs. Mohr and Dr. Mohr introduced as exhibits was to show the relations of the parties one to words the other during the last two years.

Attorney Fitzgerald insisted that the papers should not be admitted.

Judge Stearns said:

"In order to show that the State has a right to show that the parties were engaged in divorce litigation."

DIVORCE LIBELS READ.

Attorney-General Rice then read a petition in divorce filed by Mrs. Elizabeth Frances Mohr against Charles Franklin Mohr on February 7, 1914. The petition charged Dr. Mohr with intemperate use of alcohol, with associating with other women and with excessive use of opium. The petition declared that Dr. and Mrs. Mohr were married "on or about May 12, 1903."

The petition asked for a separate maintenance for Mrs. Mohr and for the custody of the two children and an amount of money equal to keep them.

Attorney Fitzgerald put in a vigorous objection at the reading of this document, and protested on the ground that if the thirty or more papers on file in litigation that has been brought around by the doctor and Mrs. Mohr were read, the State would open up a flood of evidence that the court ought not to try.

Judge Stearns: "I do not intend to try the domestic affairs of the Mohr family. I will allow the Attorney-General to submit the bare record of the filing of the libel petition and to the various injunctions brought either by Mrs. or Dr. Mohr, but I will not permit myself to go into details regarding the various suits."

VALUE RESTRICTED.

The Attorney-General then introduced a supplemental petition filed in connection with the divorce suit. This was a petition which, while the court is restrain Dr. Mohr from either selling or transferring his Newport home or any other property until the divorce cases had been tried and a decision given.

The Attorney-General next read a petition filed by which was filed by Dr. Mohr asking the court to issue an injunction against Mrs. Mohr so she could not dispose of his property.

Attorney Fitzgerald once more objected to the introduction of papers, and he was introduced the proofs of the statements contained there would have to be proven by the court.

Attorney-General Rice—I am not trying to establish the truth of these papers, but I am merely showing the litigation that was going on between Dr. and Mrs. Mohr in 1914, and show what their frame of mind must have been.

Judge Stearns ruled that the papers were admissible, and would not permit the entire document to be read. Attorney-General Rice asked Clerk Hoot if the paper was exactly the same as when it was filed on March 26, 1914, and the answer was in the affirmative.

Mohr would be the first, but Attorney Lewis said today that he wanted his client's side of the story to be heard before the others.

Much of the time of defendants, Mrs. Mohr, Brown and Spellman, have their own witnesses and will present an individual defence.

MOHR DEFENCE ROUNDING UP WITNESSES FOR ITS OPENING

Providence, Jan. 24.—James F. McCarrin of Cushing, Carroll & McCarrin, attorneys for Mrs. Mohr, was absent from the trial today for the first time since it began. Mr. McCarrin was out of town to serve notice on one of the former Mohr servants who is wanted by the defence to tell of Mrs. Mohr's attitude toward her husband when they lived together.

Constable James Sherman was out today with ten subpoenas for witnesses for the defence and he will endeavor to serve an equal number tomorrow.

Miss Emily G. Barger appeared in the courtroom again today and waited in the Attorney-Generals office to see whether the defence will want her to appear or not.

The lawyers for the defence are at sea at the present time, as they have not had any ruling from the court as to which defendant will be heard first. It was generally assumed that Mrs.

SAYS BELASCO PLAY IS NOT BARRED YET

Mayor Curley, who has been charged by David Belasco with forbidding his master production, "Marie-Odile," in Boston, today denied that he had "barred" the play. But the Mayor did say that he had informed Manager Rich of the Hollis Street Theatre that the risk the theatre management would be taking if they produced any play which might be condemned by the Board of Censors.

"Well, Manager Rich," said the Mayor, "that we had not barred the play and could not bar it under the law until the production had been given in Boston once or twice. I explained that under the new law it would be necessary not only to ban a play which the board condemned, but also to suspend the theatre's license if an objectionable production were given. In my talk with him I did not attempt to pass upon the play, 'Marie-Odile,' which I have since learned has been running an exhibition of a general sense.

"I have not stopped the play from coming to Boston."

Ida Graustein Starts Big Probe of Railroads

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Ida S. Graustein of Cambridge, Mass., has proved that a woman will have her way no matter what means are necessary to accomplish the end. Starting by filing with the Interstate Commerce Commission a complaint regarding milk and cream rates in New England, she has brought about a general investigation into the rates the railroads are charging on milk and cream throughout the United States.

Miss Graustein buys milk and cream from New England farmers and has it shipped to Boston. Her first complaint was designed merely to induce the commission to compel the Boston & Maine Railroad to reduce from $62.71 to $31 per car the milk and cream rate from Vergennes, Vt., to Boston.

The Boston & Maine did not want to make this concession, but Miss Graustein was persistent and finally first induced the commission to investigate all milk and cream rates in New England and then all milk and cream rates in the United States.

AMOS H. WHIPPLE, HOTEL MAN, DEAD

Amos H. Whipple, one of the leading hotel men in the East died today at the Copley Square Hotel, of which he had been owner for the past 12 years. He was 69 years old. He had suffered for six months from heart trouble. His brother, Sherman L. Whipple, the widely known Boston attorney, was at his bedside when he died.

Amos H. Whipple was born in New London, N. H., the son of Dr. Solomon Whipple and Mrs. Lucy Harvey Whipple. He was a direct descendant in the tenth generation from Matthew Whipple, who settled at Ipswich in 1635.

He was president of the Boston Hotel Association last year. His hostelry life brought him into direct contact with thousands of people, and he numbered many public men among his personal friends.

SAY LONGSHOREMAN HIT WRONG MAN

Patrick Wiseman, a giant longshoreman, was charged with assault and battery on John J. Reardon in the Sixth Boston Court today and was fined $20. Somebody said something to Wiseman as he was walking along West Broadway Saturday evening, and it is alleged that he picked out Reardon, an innocent bystander, and, according to Sergeant Murphy's testimony, struck Reardon with his fist, knocking him down. Reardon is suffering from a broken jaw and injuries to his head. Wiseman was given two weeks to pay the fine.

PASTORS REFUSE TO HEAR HOWARD NOBLE

The Congregational ministers meeting in Pilgrim Hall today voted, 15 to 5, against a motion offered by the Rev. William A. MacNair of Attleboro to invite Howard Noble, secretary and publicity agent of the Brewers' Association of Massachusetts, to speak before the ministers.

The motion by Pastor MacNair specified that Mr. Noble was to be invited to address the ministers against the claims of Governor Capper of Kansas, "who declares Mr. Noble does not tell the truth in his statistics."

ASSAULT CHARGED OVER LOCKING DOOR

The proper hour for a landlady to lock the front door at night came up in Somerville Court today. Mrs. Patricia Barbera was charged with assault on Mrs. Marianne De Vico. The De Vicos own a house and occupy the ground floor. The Barberas live on the second floor. Mrs. De Vico locked the front door at 10 p. m. on January 16. Mrs. Barbera thought it should be left unlocked until further notice. Therefore, Mrs. De Vico declared, Mrs. Barbera assaulted Mrs. De Vico. The case was continued.

HIT ON HEAD BY 25-POUND WEIGHT

A twenty-five-pound coal plate, which was accidentally dropped fifty feet from the top of Tower 2 at Mystic wharf today, struck Joseph Conservich, aged sixty-five, on the head. He was breathing when picked up. He was hurried to the relief Hospital, where it was said his skull was fractured but that he had a chance for life.

Legislative Notes

Former Senator Bagley of East Boston stated today that he was not aware that the attitude of the city in asking fifth was against additional appropriations.

Bagley was advocating a bill to increase the salaries of court officers in the Charles and other district courts.

The Committee on Legal Affairs today reported favorably on the bill to increase the pay to police officers called as witnesses in the lower courts.

A delegation of Somerville citizens, including Mayor Brooks, appeared before the Committee on Cities today in favor of a bill to authorize the city to borrow $100,000 for the public works to be widened.

J. F. Merrill, a Civil War veteran in the soldiers' relief department of the State House, was forced to retire because of age, under a bill before the Committee on Civil Service report a session bill in his behalf.

When the ballots are turned in for the Secretary of State's office this week, the Democratic candidates in the Fifth Hampden Representative District, February 1, all signed the Prohibitionists' anti appeal for the first time as a legal political party in the State. The drawing to day the Prohibitionists secured first place on the ballot.

A tentative agreement expected to end the Boston Elevated strike was reached today at a conference of the Bay State Fishing Company, committees representing the striking fishermen, and the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration.

BLAME WIRES FOR FIRE AT TREMONT

Albert M. Sheehan, business manager of the Tremont Theatre, the stage of which was burned out by a $125,000 four-alarm fire yesterday, announced today that the theatre would undoubtedly be rebuilt and that reconstruction would take about three months.

Mr. Sheehan blamed crossed wires for the fire. He scouted any theory of a lighted cigar butt. He said:

"The total loss is about $125,000. The fire was undoubtedly caused by crossed wires on the stage. There is nothing to this theory of a cigar butt. We were very strict on the anti-smoking rules in the theatre and there is no part in 'Daddy Long Legs,' which was running at the theatre, which called for anyone in the company to smoke on the stage.

"Without doubt the theatre will be rebuilt, but no definite plans have been made yet. It will probably take about three months before we are able to reopen. But we shall do nothing until the lighting system is fixed, so we can see to go ahead.

The "Daddy Long Legs" Company will continue its Boston run at the Hollis Street Theatre, beginning there February 7.

The advance sale on "Daddy Long Legs" was between $10,000 and $12,000. Refund to people who have paid for seats in advance will begin at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning at the store of the Eastern Talking Machine Company, No. 177 Tremont street door to the theatre.

The State police and Building Commissioner O'Hearn made joint investigation today into the fire.

Harry Davis, business manager of "Daddy Long Legs," said that new scenery and costumes for the production were begun today in New York. The scenery was all destroyed. The bills of the costumes were also useless by fire or water or smoke.

The production is mainly by Klaw & Erlanger, with Henry Miller, the star, having a part interest. A representative of Klaw & Erlanger is quoted as putting the loss to the producers at $40,000. Mr. Miller was reported today as putting the scenery and costume loss at $10,000. The $40,000 estimate may include loss of business.

AWAIT HAUGHTON'S WORD TOMORROW

Percy D. Haughton, president of the Braves, may announce his retirement as football coach at Harvard when he addresses a mass meeting of students in the Harvard Union, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Added significance may be given to this belief with the appearance of Coach Reggie Brown, Haughton's former strategist and scout, also as a speaker. Tube or Captain Eddie Mahan and Captain Joe Gilman will also be on hand.

Plans for the coming football season will be outlined at this meeting, and a petition signed by the 1916 men, proving pictures of the Harvard-Yale game which Harvard won 41-0 will be shown after the speeches.

Attleboro, Jan. 24.—One thousand employes at the American Machine Company here received a 7½ per cent. increase in wages today.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which, if not completely eliminated from the system daily, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From the mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons, gases, toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal pure and sweet and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headaches, colds, biliousness and many others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, coated tongue, sour stomach after meals, are urged to get a good supply of limestone phosphate from the druggist and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember, inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood as the bowel pores do, hence, while the bowel pores do, just as soap and hot water cleanse, sweeten and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.—Advertisement.

MASTER AT DEER ISLAND OUSTED BY MAYOR

nation. I went to Deer Island on Saturday afternoon. I talked with prisoners. I found one very pathetic case—that of a young girl, twenty-two years old, who has been an inmate of jails or institutions ever since she was fifteen years old because of a chronic waywardness for which she is hardly responsible.

WILL PLEAD FOR GIRL.

"She has been an inmate at Deer Island now for twenty months and I am told she is entitled at the end of that time to be paroled to the custody of the Governor for the relief of this girl. I will plead Commissioner Shaw be asked to resign?

"I have not discussed that with Mr. Shaw.

"Will there be any other dismissals at Deer Island?

"There will be others later; I do not care to go into details now."

SAY TINKHAM IS SLATED.

Samuel E. Tinkham, acting Division Engineer in the Bridge and Ferries Department, is the next slated to feel the Mayor's axe, according to gossip at the City Hall.

The Mayor and a number of other heads of City Department, it is understood, were contemplated, and that a list of promotions to fill the vacated places will soon be announced.

He denied that Frank Seiberlich, Election Commissioner, would be shifted to the post of Superintendent of Supplies "for the present."

Lloyd H. Chase, ex-car inspector and one of the men dismissed, formally reported for duty today. He was told to report for work for him. He was apparently acting under advice of counsel in reporting for duty as he, with others are fighting dismissal in the courts.

LOMBARD PAROLE CASE TO COUNCIL

The parole petition of John B. Lombard, former town treasurer of Framingham, who is serving a term of from ten to fifteen years in Charlestown State Prison for forging $200,000 of the town's notes, was referred to the Governor's Council today by Governor Walsh.

Lombard's petition was filed with former Governor Walsh early last year. Governor Walsh placed the matter informally before the Council and it was learned that several members were opposed to the petition. Governor Walsh decided not to present the petition formally to the Council.

Lombard, who is about sixty-five years old, was sentenced on Jan. 24, 1910, under a minimum sentence of ten years. Lombard claimed that he never received the proceeds of the defalcations, but that the money went to Charles S. Cummings, a Boston bank broker, who was sentenced to serve five years, but was shortly liberated from prison on parole conditions.

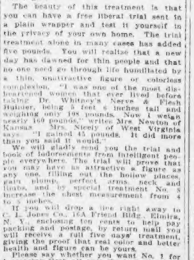
FLESH AND FIGURE
For Every Woman



Every woman can have an attractive figure and plump shoulders and arms. Dr. Whitner's secret has done it for thousands of others and will do it for you.

Mrs. B. W. Abbott, formerly of Boston, now of 372 Eighth avenue, New York City, writes us: "I was very thin when I started your treatment four years ago. By following your course I gained 22 pounds and still keep the weight. I am the picture of health, with rosy cheeks, just as when I was a girl.

The beauty of this treatment is that you can have a free liberal trial sent in plain wrapper and test it yourself in the privacy of your own home. The trial treatment alone in many cases has added pounds of flesh. You will realize that a new day has dawned for thin people and that no one need go through life humiliated by a thin, unattractive figure or colorless complexion. "I was one of the most discouraged girls you ever saw before I began taking Dr. Whitner's Nerve & Flesh Builder," says Miss Lucy Hall, aged 20, weighing only 108 pounds. Now I weigh a healthy 140 pounds," writes Miss Hall of Kansas. Mrs. Nicely of West Virginia writes: "I can tell you what I have gained, but then you said it would."

We are willing to send you the trial and book of [illegible] from intelligent people every where. The trial will prove what you may have to attractive a figure as you desire. It will make hollow places plump, perfect arms, neck and shoulders. Write for free trial treatment. Enclose the chest measurement from 4 inches under the arm pits.

WEST ROXBURY HAS MANY 'L' COMPLAINTS

West Roxbury has joined the army of protest against Boston Elevated service. West Roxbury is not satisfied with unfulfilled promises and with suggestions, made by division superintendents, of what the Elevated may do at some future time.

In other words West Roxbury and citizens of Roslindale living on the Charles River line of cars running from Forest Hills ask for improvements at once.

They say that the population of a large prosperous district is growing so fast that the Elevated fails to keep pace with it.

One citizen interviewed maintained that cars are being used which were once dray by horses. It is asserted that the introduction of trailers has made it possible to resurrect condemned cars that had long since gone out of commission.

Among other complaints are those in connection with the Forest Hills terminal. While it is recognized that an enlargement of the station is impossible until present litigation has been decided, other suggestions made by the transportation committee of the West Roxbury Citizens' Association would, it is claimed, bring great relief.

MEANINGLESS PROMISE.

According to report, these changes were promised as far back as last November, but nothing has as yet been done.

Passengers object to standing on the upper Elevated platform on cold days waiting, some times four or five minutes, for a train, which has been standing for the same length of time a hundred yards down the track, entirely empty.

Propositions have been made to eliminate some of the confusion at the terminal, and thereby facilitate the loading and unloading of cars by installing a signal signboard which will indicate not only to those on the street level, but to those above, preparing to come down, one of the several stairways, where cars to particular localities are to stop.

Another idea for which the transportation committee of the West Roxbury Citizens' Association is responsible is concerned with the cars coming to Forest Hills from Jamaica Plain loaded with passengers who are compelled to change to other lines. It is said dire confusion might be evaded by allowing these packed cars to unload outside the regular inclosure on a platform to the north.

There is a general opinion among real estate men of the West Roxbury district that a large region to the west along Wells street remains unoccupied and undeveloped because of remote transportation facilities. A line through Wells and Centre street, it is pointed out, would not only take care of hundreds of patrons now walking a long distance to the Charles River cars, but would add $10,000,000 to Boston's taxable value.

MATTERS OF COMPLAINT.

Charles H. Eastman, a member of the transportation committee of the West Roxbury Citizens' Association, while not speaking for the entire committee, believes a large portion of the citizens of that large section of Boston stand with him.

"Much that is wrong about transportation here," he said, "is due, I am certain, to equipment so old that it was considered unfit and out of date until the trailer idea struck the Elevated; then a use for old rolling stock was found. Some of the articulated cars run on one motor, and if accidents occur delay is caused.

"The travel out here deserves the best because the line must be profitable. We are supposed to have a six and seven minute service, but often cars come bunched, and the excuse given relates to congestion at Forest Hills and Jamaica Plain.

"We were told that complete relief at Forest Hills terminal would not be possible until legal matters were settled that would allow of enlargement, but our suggestion of a sign board that would indicate where a car was to stop as is done at Park street was looked upon as a good one, and we were told that the matter would be taken up and put through within a month. Two months have slipped away and nothing has been heard of the sign.

"Another plan that might help would be a platform and covering to the north of the regular enclosure, and separated by a turnstile. In this enclosure the cars coming from Jamaica Plain would stop and unload. The passengers would then sift into the main enclosure and find their respective cars without causing great congestion and pushing, as is now the case when a crowd getting off a car meets a rush getting on.

"We ask for consideration, and if the newspapers can give us assistance we shall highly appreciate such help."

The Anti-Tuberculosis Society illustrates the frightful toll of consumption by extinguishing a light every three minutes, and shows that it is the man or woman, girl or boy, who neglects colds, whose blood is impure, who feels weak and languid, who is often the very one to contract tuberculosis.

SENATE AGAINST INTERVENTION IN MEXICO

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 24.—Mexican intervention sentiment among Senators is not strong enough to attempt a fight on the floor of the Senate to force President Wilson to action, according to Republican leaders, who have been canvassing the situation.

The plan of Republican Senators to launch a movement to discharge the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in which all the Mexican resolutions are now buried, and bring the issue to a showdown on the Senate floor has been practically abandoned.

Canvass of the sentiment in the Senate, it was learned today, revealed these facts:

That the Democrats will solidly support the President, despite a feeling among the few of them that "watchful waiting" has failed.

That only a bare majority of the forty Republicans would vote to direct the President to send the army into Mexico and keep it there until order was established.

That certain Republicans, while believing "watchful waiting" has failed, would not vote for intervention, because they do not believe in war with Mexico.

WALSH PLEADS FOR UNITY OF MINERS

Indianapolis, Jan. 24.—"Stand united and within ten years the industrial issues will overshadow all other national problems, and the United States will be made a free country industrially as well as politically," Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the Industrial Relations Committee, said today in addressing the delegates at the United Mine Workers of American convention. It was thought that the report of the wage scale committee might be heard tomorrow.

SEMAPHORE TO BE DIRECTED BY CIVILIAN

Boston's traffic semaphore was again in operation at Tremont and Winter streets today, but it has lost its character as a "mechanical cop" as a result of a letter Police Commissioner O'Meara wrote the Street Commissioners.

The semaphore is being worked by a non-police operator, but a patrolman stands by to "preserve order."

The apparatus was taken away last Friday, and when the Street Commissioners notified O'Meara that it was again in readiness for duty, the Police Commissioner wrote as follows:

"As the use of the apparatus is understood to be purely experimental, the experiment in my opinion ought to be worked out in the beginning, and until success or failure has been demonstrated, by the inventor or his agents, who are familiar with the mechanism, and have a deep personal interest in the result.

"I suggest, therefore, that the apparatus be operated for the present by agents of your board or the inventor, that a police officer shall stand by the operator, to preserve order or to take any action requiring police authority, but to assume no relations toward foot passengers or vehicles unless an emergency involving danger to either should arise.

"The latter part of this suggestion is necessary to a proper test, for the reason that if the apparatus should remain and should be operated by a policeman, it would require his exclusive attention, and it would be useless to continue the experiment under conditions which could not be made permanent."

These suggestions were adopted by the Street Commissioners.

Warns Cymric of Submarines Off Ireland's Coast

By International News Service.

New York, Jan. 24.—German submarines are again active off the southwest coast of Ireland. This information was brought here by the White Star liner Cymric. She left Liverpool January 11.

The morning after leaving Liverpool the Cymric received a wireless from the Admiralty warning her to look out for submarines. An hour later three of the newest British patrol boats have in sight and convoyed the liner to a point fifty miles west of Fastnet.

TUMULTY REPLIES TO PRATT CHARGES

Washington, Jan. 24.—Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, today hotly replied to the charge that he "put over" John J. Sinnott for the Newark postmastership because Sinnott was a Roman Catholic. The reply was made in a letter to Llewellyn E. Pratt of Nutley, N. J., who made the charges. Mr. Tumulty declares he "has no word of apology to make to any man" for his action, and scores Mr. Pratt for his utterances, which he declares "violate the proprieties that all gentlemen are bound to observe."

REPORT BRIGHTON SCHOOL BOY MISSING

The absence of 12-year-old Jerome K. Hill, a Brighton schoolboy, from his home at No. 37 Mountfood avenue since last Thursday was reported to the police today. The last his parents know of him he started on that day for St. Columbkille's Parochial School. He is four feet and seven inches tall, with light hair and light complexion. He wore a gray cap with fur earlaps, gray overcoat, brown mixed jacket and brown corduroy knickers.

HUDSON SUPER SIX
Patented by Hudson December 28, 1915
PATENT No. 1160051
TRADE NAME REGISTERED

World's Records Smashed by the Hudson Super-Six

Eights and Twelves Outrivaled—80% Extra Efficiency

SCORES of makers base their claims on Sixes of an old type.

Other makers, as a new sensation, state that Eights and Twelves are better.

But we claim this, and prove it:

The Super-Six—a Hudson invention—out-matches them all, and by 80 per cent. Any rival motor, size for size, is hardly more than half as efficient.

And the proof lies partly in official tests, which broke the world's stock-car records.

A SMALL 76 H. P. MOTOR

Here is a motor small and light, identical in size with our former Light Six.

That size of motor won most of last year's races. It has proved itself the ideal size.

We have not added one cubic inch to capacity, nor an extra cylinder. Yet we get from that motor full 76 horsepower, against the former 42 horsepower.

That is, we have added 80 per cent to efficiency by a patented method of ending vibration. We have made a motor in that ideal size the greatest motor in existence.

And the proof lies in official tests—in the world's records broken. See below.

OTHER CLAIMS ANNULLED

We were building a Six—the famous Hudson Six-40—which won the top place in the field. Not a rival today builds a Six to compare with it.

When the V-types came out—the Eights and Twelves—we built various types of them.

Then our engineers last summer conceived the Super-Six. And the very first model showed 80 per cent added efficiency, beyond the best other type.

So we discarded our Six, our Eights and our Twelves.

World's Records Broken
All Records up to 100 Miles

Made at Sheepshead Bay under supervision of American Automobile Association, with a 7-passenger stock-car Super-Six. Breaking all stock car records for any size, or any price, or any number of cylinders.

100 miles in 80 min., 21.4 sec., averaging 74.67 miles per hour, with driver and passenger.

Previous best stock car record was made with a multi-cylinder car carrying driver only.

75.69 miles in 1 hour with driver and passenger.

Two laps made at 76.75 miles per hour.

Standing start to 50 miles per hour in 16. 2 sec.

A new record in quick acceleration.

We saw that their day was ended. A smooth-running Six, light and simple, had proved itself nearly twice better.

And it proved it again last November in official world's record-breaking tests.

MARVELOUS FEATS

Think of taking a Light Six and nearly doubling its horsepower. Imagine what that reserve power means in a hundred situations.

Hills are climbed without effort. Hard roads become easy. Flexibility is multiplied. And no car ever showed such quick acceleration.

But the great fact is that this whole result comes through wiping out vibration, by attaining utter smoothness. So riding is like flying in this Super-Six.

Engine wear is reduced almost to zero. The fuel saving is enormous. For all the power gained by the Super-Six is power that was heretofore wasted—power that was lost in vibration. This quiet smoothness, also, means an all-enduring car.

All of which was amply proved in the tests which broke all world's records.

NO COMPARABLE CAR

The Super-Six is a Hudson invention, controlled by basic patent. So no other car can employ it. And its proved supremacy of 80 per cent leaves it without rivalry.

But you cannot realize what this means until you ride in the Super-Six. We invite you to do that, whether you want a new car or not. We want you to know and talk about this Super-Six performance.

CHILDREN BACK MOVE TO SAVE CONSTITUTION

"Old Ironsides must be saved."

This slogan is the pitch of the sentiment expressed by thousands of Massachusetts school children who are showing interest in the popular movement for the preservation of the famous frigate Constitution, now berthed at the Charlestown Navy Yard and in danger of going to piece from age and decay.

The sum of $150,000 will be required to complete the work of repair and the suggestion that the school children of the United States be called upon to contribute a penny each, thus making the movement take a national scope, is meeting with enthusiastic support on all sides.

Here are some of the additional letters the AMERICAN has received from Massachusetts school children:

BACK TO "INDEPENDENCE."

My suggestion is to have the children of New England have times to make money to save "Old Ironsides," and have it anchored at Fort Independence, so all old and young can see her at her old sea post once more as she was in her early days.

BENJAMIN EDWARDS, Age 12.
Mather School, Dorchester.

SCHOOL COLLECTIONS.

I am one of the many boys who plead to you to save our old and beloved frigate the Constitution, which for many years has been in the Charlestown Navy Yard.

My suggestion is to send letters to all the principals of the schools in Massachusetts to make collections for the saving of the Constitution and also to take the names of all the children who give from 1 cent upwards. With this money we could repair the Constitution and build a shelter for it in Marine Park. I am a pupil of the Robert Grammar School of Cambridge, grade 8. I am fifteen years of age.

Yours truly,
SANTY CARDULO.

P. S.—I hope all the boys and girls of Massachusetts will take part in this great act to save the old frigate Constitution.

No. 132 Harvard street, Cambridge, January 20.

"TAG DAY" PLAN.

"Old Ironsides" should not be sunk or put in the junk heap but it should be kept. I think all the school children of Massachusetts should bring a little money the amount might be raised and if not, if all the citizens helped, the sum could be easily raised.

If the money could not be raised that way this could could have a day called tag day and they could sell tags for it.

I do not think we should want "Old Ironsides" put out of the way, because it is an old relic of war, and the United States has but few relics like it.

I think people of Massachusetts are proud of it, because some of the timber came from here. I am proud of it myself.

I hope the money can be raised so we can keep "Old Ironsides." I hope by this letter we can help it. Try and see.

I am thirteen years old. I go to the School street school, Rockland, Mass. My home address is No. 114 Vernon street, Rockland.

Yours truly,
IDA RALLI.

Rockland, January 20.

GRANDPA BUGLER ON OLD SHIP.

I think it would be a very good plan to have photographs taken of "Old Ironsides," mounted, and have them distributed to the masters of every school to send to the children for ten cents or more. I think most every child would be proud to have such a picture in their possession; and they would also be helping to save "Old Ironsides."

The reason I am interested in it is this: My great, great grandfather, Mr. Thomas C. Byron, (my mother's great grandfather) was a fifer and bugler on the "Old Ironsides," during the war of 1812. He always took great pride in saying that he played Yankee Doodle during the engagement with the Guerriere, August 13, 1813. We also have a picture of the launching of "Old Ironsides," October 21, 1797. My mother has the original copy of all this so she can prove what I say is true.

Now I think this is a very good plan although there may be still better ones. What do you think?

FRANK ACKLES,
Ellis School No. Cambridge.

History of the Old Ship One of Glory

CHAPTER I.

The history of the frigate Constitution—"Old Ironsides"—now waiting its fate at the Charlestown navy yard, speaks of the days when old glory was new and had and saw their duty clear.

Could the old hulk talk she would tell of the greatest days and events of America when the white sails of the United States were known all over the world-wide seas.

Her part in making a nation independent and respected among all other nations of the earth was not small, and the men who manned her, though long since passed away, left their records in her logs, and the impress of their many feet on her decks.

Considering her part in the war of 1812 it seems almost a prophesy that she was named the Constitution.

When she was built in 1797, the Constitution of the United States was by no means out of danger; true it had weathered one terrific storm, but no one was optimistic enough to think it was beyond the trial stage.

It was then, to the staunch ship, built here in Boston of oak and pine grown on the hills and in the valleys of New England, that our nation looked for support and protection.

Four hundred picked men steel ready—well disciplined and intelligent—to defend her, and through her, their new country.

A captain, tried and found not wanting, held command, Captain Isaac Hull deserves no small share of the achievements credited to the ship.

She was one of seventeen men-o'-war which constituted the main strength of the United States navy, and this small, inadequate group of ships were to pit themselves against the greatest navy of the world.

England, at that time, had 1,045 battle ships, with a tonnage of 850,900. The personnel of the navy ran as high as 151,572. America had 5,025 men, a tonnage of 15,380 and 442 guns.

The little navy belonging to the United States, with the Constitution as one of its chief stand-bys, was destined to meet overwhelming odds and come through victoriously.

In these days it would be deemed little less than a miracle that there should be so many uncertain elements as to make the outcome, under such odds, uncertain.

Of 200 battles and encounters England's navy had had, she had been victorious in all but five instances.

With these advantages of uninterrupted victory, England felt almost certain of the outcome with the colonies and she made no great effort to prepare.

America passed her limit of patience because England continued to impress sailors and confiscate cargoes.

It was a plucky challenge America was making to England, and as to what happened, the inquisitive must wait until tomorrow.

Gallivan Has Bill to Save 'Old Ironsides'

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 24.

REPRESENTATIVE JAMES A. GALLIVAN of Massachusetts will introduce in the House today a bill authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to spend $150,000 to repair the frigate Constitution, "Old Ironsides."

The bill directs Secretary Daniels to anchor "Old Ironsides" in the waters of Dorchester Bay at a point off Marine Park, South Boston, after the completion of the necessary repairs.

"It was a laudable campaign that the Boston AMERICAN began and the interest shown by Bostonians, particularly the school children, is evidence that a popular chord was struck," said Mr. Gallivan last night.

LLOYD-GEORGE SAYS ALLIES WILL WIN WAR

By IVER NICHOLSON,
International News Service Special Correspondent.

Copyright, 1916, by the International News Service.

London, Jan. 24.—Few people will quarrel with the statement that the outstanding figure of the war in Great Britain is David Lloyd-George, minister of munitions.

For a month past it has been the aim and ambition of every newspaperman on this side, either permanent or visiting, to get Lloyd-George to talk for publication. Up to today he had steadfastly refused, but at my earnest solicitation, and making, of course, because he wanted to, Mr. Lloyd-George consented to answer some questions dealing with the situation today after eighteen months of war.

In choosing the International News Service as the medium for making his views known throughout the United States and Canada, the minister of munitions appreciated the fact that he would be speaking to millions of people all more or less interested in the world war.

The first question was, whether England is really losing the whole weight into the war.

ENGLAND FIRMLY NEUTRAL.

I recalled the interview given by Mr. Lloyd-George on New Year's Day, 1914, in which he made a plea for sanity in armaments, believing the common sense of the industrial classes—capitalists or labor—had risen against the organized insanity of modern armaments and the race for supremacy. Mr. Lloyd-George then said:

Germany's military classes saw this fact just as clearly as I did. They made a most desperate effort for that very reason to re-establish their predominance. Germany started spending money on its army as well as its navy. It was this could only mean that the military class was intending to strike at the earliest possible moment and that the predominance of Germany was once more to be found in her army.

Lloyd-George just a year ago, at the treasury, when he was Chancellor of the exchequer, told me:

"We are going to win the war." I reminded him of this today. He replied forcefully:

"And I am still of that opinion."

To a question about the strength and solidarity of the alliance he answered:

"The allies are as firmly united now as at the beginning of the war."

When I hinted at the possibility of industrial trouble at home, Lloyd-George retorted:

I refuse to believe that such a thing will occur. I am convinced that those who would entertain for a moment the idea of thus hampering our gallant troops at the front are but a very small fraction of workers. As for industrial compulsion it is merely a bogey employed by those who would create trouble in order to further their objects.

If the militarists in Germany should win, their triumph will be permanent. Make no mistake. We should witness the triumph of an idea—a pernicious ideal, of course—but a great one. It is just the old idea of organized force which has been the basis of all military empires.

COMMAND OF THE SEA.

The Germany of quiet, pacific development, the Germany that was concerning herself with improvement in the condition of her people, the Germany that was increasing her democratic vote by millions at each successive election, would vanish from the sight of this generation, and in its place what should we see?

We should see a Germany of triumphant warriors seeking whom it could devour, looking out for fresh spheres, or shall I say, fresh hemispheres to conquer.

If we overthrow German militarism now, it will be because our command of the sea has given us time to organize and so make good our unpreparedness. You have only to imagine what would have happened if command of the sea had not been ours, or if it had been wrested from us. We would have been overrun as easily as the Balkan peninsula within three months, three months, mind you, of the declaration of war.

London would have fallen as quickly as Belgrade, France would have made a gallant resistance; so would Russia, but the arming on the north and eastern frontiers of France could have been turned by descents on her south and west coasts.

If Germany were to win the war Europe would be helpless. Let us never forget that indisputable fact. Russia and France would not be permitted to build up their armies to defend their frontiers and command of the sea would be taken from Great Britain.

"What about the Monroe Doctrine?" I inquired.

"I cannot help wondering," replied Lloyd-George, with a mischievous twinkle in his eye, "if in that event it would fare better than the British fleet."

Asked as an ardent social reformer I freely confess I was leaning a good deal from that side of Germany, particularly in the direction of municipal and national organizations.

But this is my point—side by side with this Germany which we admired was the military Germany.

These two Germanys could not live together in rapid and beneficent development. This new Germany meant the permanent overthrow of the old barbarous Germany, for, in spite of the fact that it employed weapons of science and culture, it was not the less barbarous.

War Summary

"Peace Talk" assumed importance in the war news today, in the absence of fighting of importance. The "Peace Talk" centered upon these recent developments:

1—Montenegro was offered separate peace. She appears to have refused, but is now having peace forced upon her at the cannon's mouth.

2—Serbia is reported to have been offered peace.

3—That Belgium will be offered peace, restoration of her territory and damages, is reported.

4—Japanese newspapers are taking a hostile attitude toward Britain, recognizing the certainty of a clash of interests in the East after the war; and German papers respond with talk of a separate peace with Japan.

English sources intimate that should Belgium make peace, England will force Holland into the war and attack Germany through Dutch territory. England does not "guarantee" Holland's neutrality, so the British feel they would be open to no more reproaches here than in the case of Greece.

All these matters, however, are only in the "Talk" stage.

England and Sweden appear to be on the point of rupture. Senator Fall of New Mexico has received private information that Sweden may declare war on Britain and Russia within the week, opening hostilities by an attack on Finland.

Such immediate action seems improbable; but a conference of the foreign ministers of the three Scandinavian countries is to be held in February, when something may develop. Sweden, Norway and Denmark have agreed to stand together in this war. Whether Sweden could carry the others with her in rupture with the allies is doubtful.

Sweden has taken a firm stand against illegal encroachment on her neutral rights, and has supported her rights by giving an armed convoy to her vessels trading with German ports.

Germany's reprisal for the Baralong massacre, when English seamen shot German sailors swimming in the water, may be a resumption of submarine warfare, it appears. England has not denied the Baralong massacre. The Cymric, which has reached New York, says she was warned of submarines off Ireland. None had been seen there for some months. The resumption of their activity in those waters is not improbable.

Russia continues to advance toward Erzerum, she reports; the Turks, according to her statement, fleeing in disorder.

Austria has occupied the principal Montenegrin seaports; and what remains of the Montenegrin army is now cut off from all supplies and is practically without artillery.

Turkey, it is reported, will admit that one of her submarines sank the Persia. Thus the quarrel of the United States will be shifted from Vienna to Constantinople.

LINER BRINDISI TORPEDOED; U. S. CITIZENS DIE

Washington, Jan. 24.—That Americans lost their lives when the Italian liner Brindisi was sunk, early this month, in the Adriatic, and that the vessel was torpedoed, and not sunk by a mine, as was at first supposed, were the statements today of Emilio Vitta, president of the French Society for the Rescue of Serbian Children, according to cable dispatches today.

Vitta gives the death list as over 400. He is quoted in dispatches from Rome as saying:

"The Brindisi was sent to the bottom just outside the Harbor of San Giovanni di Medua, on January 6. I saw her destroyed.

"All the Americans on board lost their lives, as well as 440 Montenegrins.

"The Brindisi carried $200,000 in gold, and much food and ammunition for the Montenegrin army."

Vitta was on board the Italian ship Barletty when he witnessed the disaster, the dispatch says.

At the time of the sinking of the Brindisi, the loss of life was given as about 200. The disaster occurred near the Albanian coast.

On board the vessel were 440 Montenegrins, who had been brought from the United States to serve in the Montenegrin army.

The vessel sailed from Brindisi, on the Italian coast, across the Adriatic. The news of her sinking was given out by the Montenegrin consul at Paris.

That there were Americans aboard is wholly probable, as great numbers of American doctors and nurses have gone to Montenegro and Serbia, and many of these have gone by way of Italy, crossing the Adriatic from Italian ports.

San Giovanni di Medua, off which port the vessel was sunk, is about 60 miles, miles south of the port of Scutari.

The port had been used for landing supplies and troops from Italy to aid the Montenegrins, and Austrian submarines and mine-layers' ships had been active in that neighborhood and had sunk some score of vessels in those waters.

STANDARD OIL SHIP HELD UP BY BRITISH

London, Jan. 24.—The Standard Oil tank steamship Petrolite, from Philadelphia, January 3, for Copenhagen, with a cargo of petroleum, and the Norwegian steamship Skagerak, from Baltimore, January 1, for Christiania, with a cargo of wheat, rye and barley, have been taken into Kirkwall.

It was announced from Washington on January 17 that State Department officials were investigating an affidavit by Captain Thompson of the Petrolite that his vessel was fired on and stopped by an Austrian submarine off Alexandria, Egypt, on December 5 last, and that supplies were removed.

Lowell Weavers Return.

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 24.—The strike of the weavers of the Bay State Cotton Corporation, involving about 800 employes, terminated today with the return of the weavers, who received advances varying from 5 to 10 per cent.

TURKS RETREAT ON 50-MILE FRONT

By International News Service.

Petrograd, Jan. 24.—Turkish forces in the region of Erzerum and Alaschgerd, in Armenia, are retreating on a fifty-mile front, pursued relentlessly by the Russians. Turkish losses have been very heavy and the Turks have been compelled to abandon a large amount of supplies.

Despite the intensely cold weather and the deep snows in the mountain regions, the Russians are attacking incessantly, using both cavalry and infantry. It is reported on good authority that owing to the terrific pressure of the Russian forces, Turkey has about decided to abandon the project for the invasion of Egypt.

Fifty thousand German troops are said to have arrived in Turkey recently but if these soldiers are used they will probably be thrown against the Russians and the British in the Trans-caucasian, Persian and Irak spheres of activity.

N.Y. TEAM TO CALL AGAIN

Hockey Fans May See Hobey Baker & Co. at War with Arenas Following Harvard Club Game.

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

THOUGH the St. Nicholas A. C. hockey team defeated B. A. A. Saturday night, and allowing that it may win the championship of the American Amateur Hockey League, annexing that title won't give Hobey Baker & Co. the amateur championship of the country.

To clinch the latter title the St. Nicholas seven will find it necessary to topple over the aggregations as represent Harvard, Dartmouth and the Arena Hockey Club.

While it is by no means a certainty, there is nevertheless a chance that the star New York seven will be seen in games with all three of these teams. At the present time negotiations are under way for its appearance here against Harvard and Dartmouth. Then, Saturday night Manager Von Bernuth of the St. Nicholas A. C. informed Manager Lougee of the Arena that such a thing as an Arena-St. Nicholas game might be arranged.

The Arena seven would like nothing better than to clash with the famous New York bunch. It hasn't any fear of Baker and feels that with all its stars in good physical condition, it could more than hold its own with the star Gotham outfit. Should these games be arranged local hockey fans are in for a real treat. St. Nicholas has one more Amateur League game scheduled for Boston, playing Harvard Club Saturday night, March 4.

TWO BIG GAMES COMING.

This week's hockey schedule calls for a game Wednesday night between B. A. A. and Harvard Club, and a battle Saturday night with Harvard varsity sextette at the Arena. McGill University team. The schoolboys' games scheduled are Arlington and Hinds this afternoon at 2.30 and Rindge and Medford Friday afternoon at the same hour.

Whereas B. A. A. easily trimmed Harvard Club in their last meeting the indications are the tables will be reversed Wednesday night. Whereas the Harvard Club has been strengthened, B. A. A. has been weakened considerably through poor condition and the injury to Shilton. Newt Foster, who starred at point for Harvard varsity a few years ago and who also was a leading B. A. A. player two seasons ago, has returned to Boston and is playing with the Harvard Club seven.

Foster's playing at point will permit Bob Clifford to be shifted to the forward line, thus rounding out an already formidable combination. Clifford is a fine skater and stick-handler, and works alongside of Tref Hicks and Bob Phillips, with either Elmer Wannamaker or Saltonstall on the other side. The outer wing pair gives Coach Winsor little worry. Foster looked good with the Harvard Club team at its last practice session, and, though out of the game almost two years, showed exceptional form.

WIGGLESWORTH IMPROVING.

Wigglesworth, the Harvard Club goal tend, about whom so much that was ridiculous was said and written at the last B. A. A. game, has improved 100 per cent, and the chances are he will acquit himself favorably in Wednesday night's game. Unless Sands Jones and Hutchinson take a decided brace in their play, and Skilton's weak knee improves, the night should prove a gala one for the supporters of the Commonwealth avenue players.

Saturday night's Harvard varsity-McGill game should provide some excellent hockey. The Montreal collegians are playing a strong, fast game, similar to Canada's leading opponents in college circles.

It was announced today that "Kid" Parsons, a McGill star of two years ago, had been declared eligible for service with the Arena seven. He will be seen in action in the Arena's remaining games. At present Parsons is employed in Lynn, but will return to McGill next Fall and finish his course. The addition of Parsons to the Arena squad assures more speed, as well as a stick handler par excellence.

DILLON CALLS OFF BOUT WITH COWLER

New York, Jan. 24.—On account of a sudden attack of the grippe, Jack Dillon has been forced to postpone his bout with Tom Cowler at the Broadway Sporting Club tomorrow night until February 1.

FULLER IS FIRST PICK.

St. Louis, Jan. 24.—Myron Fuller, the old Yale player and Colby's coach, is favored to succeed George Hogan as director of athletics at St. Louis University. Wingard of Maine and Barron of Georgetown are two other candidates in the field.

THE RABBITS' COLUMN

By Walter J. Mcgarraville
SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

But for the frost in the ground the past two days would have been fine for baseball. There are many days in the Spring when the weather is much colder and conditions more unfavorable. You fans realize what such weather means to the ball players. They don't dare cut loose, fearing their arms, so the quality of baseball is lessened.

Here's hoping we have an early Spring and fine weather, for to me a good start at the opening of the season is a big thing for any club. Look back to the Spring of 1915 and recall what the Phillies did. They got away to a start that was a romp. Nobody expected it to prove other than a flash, and everybody was looking for them to crack. They didn't, that is, not until the World's Series. Then they certainly proved disappointing.

Give the Braves just such a start and they will never catch up. When it comes to the World's Series, well, we play better then than at any other time. So have courage. The doubters may claim we are weak in pitching and catching departments, and perhaps we are, but we haven't got started yet.

I look to see new faces on the rubber and back of the plate. The club just has to have that added strength to get there. Our infield looks pretty good, and our outfield will be the strongest the club has had since I became a member.

Almost all the clubs in the National League have given out their Spring training plans but the Braves. It is, of course, early, but I expect soon to see the announcement of the date of our departure for the cantonment of Florida. I am from Springfield, Mass., you know, but in this matter consider me from Missouri.

As evidence of what other clubs thought of Maranville, the fine presented by their refusal to make a scene so Boss George could get back to Macon. However, another season may tell a different story. Then, again, Miami may prove all that it is being toted. You never can tell.

By all this it is plain that I am getting restless. Another day of Spring weather and I'm off. You certainly all your hockey and basketball. Just give me baseball with the music of the bat. Nothing can beat it. The murmur of the crowd when something goes wrong and the mighty roar in approval. That is the dope.

Joe Connolly and Red Smith are supposed to be the only players unsigned by the Boston club for 1916 from what I hear. Joe is a holdout, he will fall into line soon. Just now he is busy with his milk business. Red, it is said, is not. Any time Manager Stallings never has much trouble getting a player after a man, and this one he can use at the third corner. Holdouts haven't much of a chance these days of Peace.

From the pictures of Joe Loomis, I should think he could rival Siecher in the scissor stuff. No wonder he is fast. He reminds one of "Hop" Myers, who could run three strides and fall reaching first. By the way, "Hop" is among those released by the Federal League. He has had a peculiar career.

Cobb's statement that by outdoor life, hunting and fishing, he keeps in fine shape, is worthy of consideration. Ty adds that all he needs to do is to throw a few balls in the Spring and he is ready for the season's work. The theory of long training trips is gradually being exploded.

If Ty Cobb, the king of them all, keeps in shape during the Winter why shouldn't the other ball players. They have as much at stake as he. His reputation and position in baseball are based upon work, hard work, and natural ability. All do not possess his ability, nor do more than 10 per cent of the ball players, but that is no excuse for the rest. Why not?

Winning a game is not enough in this city. You can't win in any game without hard work, and ball players should always have in mind during the Winter months the question of condition. To report in condition insures just so much more time open for the real work; that of whipping a team into shape as a team in practice.

Merger May Be Completed Today

New York, Jan. 24.—Magnates of the New England League and the defunct Eastern Association met here today to form "The best baseball league New England ever had."

A committee composed of John H. Farrell, secretary of the National Association of minor leagues; Tim Murnane, president of the New England League, President Edward G. Barrow of the International League conferred with the team owners. The proposition of forming a ten-club league was advanced. According to this plan the following five towns would be selected, from the New England League: Portland, Lowell, Lynn, Worcester and Lawrence while the following five towns would be taken from the roster of the Eastern Association or the Connecticut League as it once was known: Springfield, Hartford, New Haven, New London and Bridgeport.

Among those taking part in the meeting was Hugh Duffy, owner of the Pennant-winning club in the New England League.

Duffy declared he would probably sell out to local men and that he may manage the Rochester team this year if it decides to have a bench manager. If his deal goes through, Harry Lord, manager of the Buffalo Feds will probably manage the Portland team. C. T. Chapin, owner of the Rochester Club and Duffy conferred for some time, but stated that they had reached no definite terms.

Lets His Actions Speak Hooper Showed Them

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

OUT in Capitola, Cal., they have talked of erecting a shaft in a public square in honor of the baseball ability of a native son.

The only thing that prevents it is that shafts, memorials, monuments and the like are only placed in position for dead ones, and Harry Hooper is very much alive. Aside from putting Capitola on the map, Harry has in many ways caused the eyes of the world to turn in the direction of the Santa Clara Valley and its possibilities.

Harry goes after the money a great deal like he plays a fly ball. He has his eye on it all the time, and his judgment is of the best. When in his early career as a college player they told him he didn't have the pitch and fall attention to the surf. They are proud of that and their sunshine, but the glorious climate of Capitola received an awful bump when the Red Sox took their famous "Coast to Coast" trip for training purposes. It would have been fine for a bunch of ducks, nothing but water. It splashed against the windows of the hotel at night and lulled you to sleep, and it awakened you in the morning. There was nothing like it for persistency.

All the "coasters" were strong for the alibi stuff. "Nothing like this ever happened before." "Most unusual." Yes, it was. Towns like Ventura, the home of "Sea Lion" Charley Hall, were under water, the natives navigating the streets in boats. Sacramento's park was a lake. So you see they are strong for water, both turbulent and still.

That didn't discourage the Red Sox. They knew it would be dry "back East" so their first appearance on the water-logged diamond of St. Mary's College, where Hooper matriculated was endured with little, if any, kicking.

UP THE MONUMENT.

Take a "native son" East for the first time and he will put an easterner to shush. He knows more about the historic spots in the eastern country than many a native, and what is more, visits them.

Speaking of shafts, the idea appeals to Hooper.

When he visited Washington, D. C., for the first time he made right away for the Capitol—he found the Capitola. There the huge granite shaft, overlooking the placid river filled his eye and he dashed there to view Washington monument at close range.

There was some delay in the elevator service, and being impatient, Harry started up the granite stairway winding about the shaft where the "lift" worked. On and up he plugged passing the stones bearing the names of the States that sent them, never stopping for breath, while his companions began to feel that there was no top to the monument.

If you stick long enough to any task it can be accomplished, so this climb came to an end. Not content with having scrambled to the top, Harry elected to return to the bottom on foot. He did.

That afternoon he played the first game of ball for the Red Sox, which was in left field then, and the way he tore after the fly balls and raced around the bases proved he had a strong pair of legs and was in fine condition. His companion could hardly crawl off a curbstone unassisted.

This is characteristic of Hooper. He isn't strong for talk, but is decidedly long on action.

Just now he is working in his vineyards. We've no secrets some day, when he lays his bat away for good, to have enough to make the raising of raisins profitable.

FANS EXPECT MUCH.

His advance in baseball has been like his climbing of the Washington monument. He started at the bottom unnoticed and just plugged along until they were forced to admit he could play the game. Today there isn't a man who ever saw a game of ball but what knows him to be one grand ball player.

There are many seasons of baseball ahead for Harry. The one that opens in April should be his best. After the work he displayed in the World's Series all eyes will be turned on him.

Tris Speaker is the star in the centre of the world's champion trio of garden wonders, but he has great flanking companions in Duffy Lewis and Harry Hooper.

MATT BARTLETT TO OPPOSE BURNHAM

Matt Bartlett of the Tennis and Racquet Club, State squash racquet champion, meets a worthy rival this afternoon in F. M. Burnham, a fellow club mate, in the second round of the State squash racquet championship tournament on the Harvard Club courts. Bartlett had a hard match with Fred Buxton, Saturday, while Burnham won his game in straight sets. Another dashing match is scheduled when Constantina Hutchins, B. A. A. ex-State champion, exchanges slaps with Kellogg, Harvard Club.

Tomorrow Norman Cabot meets Bryant, Union Boat Club, and C. Frothingham, Jr., Harvard Club, plays C. Peabody, Union Boat Club. The second round closes at 6 p. m. Wednesday. The winner of the tournament will be the State's representative at the Middle States championships at Baltimore, Saturday, February 12.

HARVARD TEAM IS AT TRAINING TABLE

The Harvard varsity team training table started this morning with ten men in attendance. Johnstone, the jumper, the Crimson's only field event man entered in the Coast Artillery games, is keeping the following nine relay runners company: Captain Bill Bingham, Eddie Teschner, Willie Willcox, Tom Pennypacker, Al Biddle, Rollo Campbell, Jack Coggeshall, Frank Donahue and Henry Minot, Prospective Captain Hank Plower of the Freshman relay will also give the members of his squad special dining service in Smith Hall.

Moakley to Stay at Cornell Ten More Years

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 24.—Jack Moakley, Cornell's famous trainer, has signed to remain in his old position ten more years; in fact, the veteran will doubtless spend the remainder of his days in Ithaca. He celebrated his fifty-second birthday last month.

Moakley completes his seventeenth year as Cornell's track and cross-country coach next June. He has made cross-country a great sport at Cornell, and fourteen of his teams have won intercollegiate championships.

Six of Moakley's teams have captured the intercollegiate championship on the track, and all the victories have been scored since 1904.

Moakley is generally regarded the premier track coach of the country. He is the man largely responsible for the popularization of athletics at Ithaca. His motto is never to drop a man from his squad, even if the man had not a ghost of a show to make the varsity team.

TOMMY M'CARTHY MAY COACH AT B. C.

Boston College's new baseball coach will be named at a meeting of the Graduate Athletic Board tonight. Among the leading candidates for the position are Joe Donahan, the former Lowell catcher, who has coached the baseball squad the past two seasons; Fred Ostregen, the former Holy Cross star and past baseman of the Lawrence Club, and Tommy McCarthy, the Red Sox scout. McCarthy is the best bet, it is reported, to land the office.

PIRATES GET SCHULTZ.

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Infielder Joe Schultz has been sold to the Pittsburgh club by President Weeghman of the Chicago Nationals.

BOWLING NEWS and COMMENT

ARCHIE WALSH, newly crowned roadlegua champion, is planning a barn-storming trip through New England. The Clauncy pegger is very popular wherever the thin pins are rolled and will doubtless prove a good drawing card.

WHILE Walsh has not made his plans public, his friends believe he will first visit several large cities in this State and then tour New Hampshire and Maine, giving nightly exhibitions en route.

WHILE there is talk of rematching Walsh and Foshler, the new champion will scarcely consider another skirmish until after March 1.

Bowling "fans" should not be too harsh in their criticism of Harry Howard because of his poor showing in the championship contest. Howard is a far better bowler than his recent work indicates. It was simply a case of where a poor start "rifled" his chances.

MANY enthusiasts claim Tom Mc Kee would have made a better showing than Howard. Of course, that is all a matter of opinion, though there is no denying the fact McKee is a corking good bowler. He has fared well in all the big tournaments of the National Duck and Candlepin Congress, thus proving his mettle under fire.

BAKER, the Arlington Boat Club star, shows no signs of relinquishing his grip upon first place in the Amateur Boston City League. What's more, it looks as if he will finish the season with an average better than 120, which is going some.

THE Garfield team of the Sons of St. George League has established the unusual record of not having won a single point in sixty games.

ODD FELLOWS, who have watched their bowling race with keen interest, can now see Mr. Pleasant alligator cavily thus spoiling a pretty triangular battle. Everett and Neptune loom up as the contenders for the title, with the odds favoring the latter outfit.

FOR the first time in years it appears as if the Fourteen League race will end without a real battle for first place being staged. It looks like a romp for the Ferdinands in spite of the fact they are but four pegs above the Osgoods.

BRITTON BALKS AT BUYING FEDERALS

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 24.—The Pittsburgh Federal League players are on the market to the highest bidder, President Schuyler Britton of the Cardinals received a bulletin from Ed Gwinner this morning offering for sale all of the rebels. "How much do you offer?" was the message. Britton's reply was: "Not one of them."

"What do you think I am?" said Britton in comment. "They want me to pay for something that originally belonged to me. Included in the list of Pittsburgh players for sale are Rebel Oakes and Pat O'Conner, who jumped the Cardinals, and I should buy them," gurgled Britton. "Not on your life."

EVERS IN A TRADE TALK

Weeghman Proposed It; Offering Zimmerman—Stallings Wants to Know More About It

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

IT is pretty hard to keep news from leaking out, particularly in baseball, and Chicago is in many respects like a sieve. At any rate the Chicago press pulled a story concerning the Braves that Boston was forced to pick up.

All this talk of Captain J. J. Evers going to the Cubs has a little foundation in fact. Owner Weeghman called Manager Stallings on the long-distance telephone from Chicago Saturday, when George was in New York. It is presumed from that that the Cubs' owner knew where to locate the Braves' boss.

OVER THE PHONE.

The talk ran something like this:

"Want to trade Evers for Zimmerman?"

"On what basis?" interrogated George.

"Let me talk with Joe."

"All right?"

There the matter stands, according to information received at the Braves' office this morning.

Nothing has been heard from Chicago, so Weeghman and Zinker must be thinking it over. Just what Bands would be acceptable to George is also unknown.

The fact that he was willing to listen to a proposition doesn't mean anything. Captain John has been away from his Troy hoos with some friends, presumably in a camp, for any effort to reach him failed, either by telephone or telegraph. Johnny is sitting tight awaiting developments.

There doesn't seem to be much doubt in the minds of those who know Joe but that he would welcome a chance to return to Chicago and the Cubs. Not just be is in any way dissatisfied with his berth on the Braves, but from the fact that Chicago is decidedly more his baseball home than Boston, and Joe Tinker one of his pals.

With Red Smith holding out, third base is uncovered for the present. With Johnny traded, the keystone position would probably fall into either Rigney or Fitzpatrick's hands.

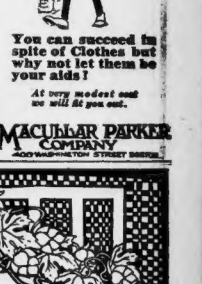
MIGHT LAND ZIM.

The fans will await developments with much interest, for they have become accustomed to J. J. at second and it is a question how they would relish Zimmerman, who would bring the "Great Zim" with his ability to play the third corner and hit the ball, but having also the happy faculty of being chased from many games a season.

Manager Stallings has handed a deuce and ain't probably could control "Zim." However, why figure a change until it is made. This one looks too far from a point where it could seriously be considered as possible.

Meanwhile Joe Connolly and Red Smith have not sent in their contracts.

Walter Tragesser's signed contract arrived at Braves Field today.



You can succeed in spite of Clothes but why not let them be your handicap.

At very modest cost we will fit you out.

The Artistic Temperament

Too Many Persons Use It to Cloak More Sins Than Charity Ever Could

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1916, Star Co.

OH, you pride yourself upon having "the artistic temperament"

If so, what is it?

Let us see.

Every day I hear the expression used, and, as a rule, to excuse some lapse of manners, or morals, or common sense, "Oh, but you know he has the artistic temperament." "Well, we must be lenient in judgment of the artistic temperament"; "I cannot be blamed, you know; I have the artistic temperament."

This artistic temperament, which seems to be used so universally as a cloak of rubber, elastic enough to cover more sins than charity, even, is, after all, a most ambiguous term. Lean and hungry-looking individuals, with hollow eyes usually claim this temperament, yet I have known it to be rampant in the plethoric and well fed.

It suggests the taste for all that is beautiful and ideal in art, the appreciation of all that is refined and rare and the enjoyment of all that is sensuous or sublime.

A corresponding distaste for the commonplace, the ugly, the vulgar, the practical, is understood. It necessitates keen pleasure and keen pain. But just why it should excuse dishonesty, selfishness, indolence and immorality I have never been able to comprehend.

If you possess "the artistic temperament" in fullest flower, do not coddle yourself with the idea that you are justified in breaking or ignoring moral, social or financial obligations. If you borrow money consider it your duty to pay it back, with interest, just as the most work-a-day, practical individual would be expected to do.

The artistic "dead beat" is quite as despicable as any other swindler, no matter whether he realizes it or not. I have heard a woman, who harped upon the theme of "artistic temperament," and who made her theories a precarious means of subsistence, declare that common vulgarians who have made money ought to feel privileged to be allowed to pay bills for people possessed of genius.

This same woman believed it her right also to make lightning changes in husbands, and she left a trail of scandals and debts behind her in two continents, all of which she lightly attributed to her "artistic temperament" and her horror of the commonplace.

She does not stand alone, I regret to say. In every community can be found her prototype, and the art centres are unfortunately honeycombed with men and women who accept social hospitalities and never say thank you; who borrow money and never suggest payment; who marry and are given in marriage and ignore their vows when the whim seize. them, and expect to be excused and admired because of their artistic talents or tastes.

The indolent loafer who becomes a tramp is despised, but the artistic loafer, who is a moral tramp posing as a genius, demands that the world not only respect, but admire him.

If you, sir, or madam, possess the artistic temperament let it not lead you into this miserable gang, who talk much about "art for art's sake," and who ostensibly despise the money-maker, while depending upon him for subsistence.

Pay your own way, keep your engagements, live up to your promises, appreciate your benefactors and respect your own manhood and womanhood before you kneel and worship your talents or your temperament. For neither possesses any real value in God's universe, unless you have character as a foundation.

Anecdotes of the Famous

LORD REDESDALE, who writes his reminiscences of King Edward VII., relates the following of that monarch's last days:

"Till as he was when he reached Buckingham Palace, he worked with all his accustomed energy, and on the Wednesday, when one of the permanent heads of the Civil Service was with him, he was seized with one of those terrible choking fits of coughing. When he got better his visitor ventured to remonstrate with him, and begged him to rest, and even to go to bed, but he ridiculed the idea and said:

"No, I shall not give in—I shall work to the end. Of what use is it to be alive if one cannot work."

That the spirit of fun is not confined to the nations of the West is shown by a story told by Harry Charles Luckock in "The City of the Dancing Dervishes and Other Sketches from the Near East." It relates to the Khoja of Aqsekehir, whom Timur-lenk, the Tartar invader, appointed a sheik of court jester.

"Timur-lenk was not only lame, but had lost an eye, and was very ugly into the bargain. One day the Timur looked at his face in a mirror, and discontented by his ugliness, began to weep. At once all present proceeded to weep in sympathy with their master, until by means of jokes and stories the courtiers succeeded in rousing Timur from his grief. But the Khoja went all the more loudly. Timur looked at him in astonishment.

"'I wept with reason,' he said, 'at beholding my ugliness, I, the lord of so many lands. But I do not understand why you should thus despair.'

"'If you, my lord,' replied the Khoja, 'wept for two hours after seeing yourself in the mirror for but an instant, is it not natural that I, who see you all day long, should weep longer than you?'"

Dr. Lloyd relates that when he became Suffragan Bishop of Thetford some people refused to have their children confirmed by him because they said he was only "half a bishop." On one of his visitations, as he was being driven to the rectory, he saw the flag on the church tower at half mast.

"Who's dead?" he asked the coachman.

"Nobody as I knows of," was the reply.

"Then why is the church flag at half mast?" asked Dr. Lloyd.

"Oh, that's for you," he was told. "We puts the flag whole mast for a real bishop and half mast for a sufferin' bishop."

Local Government

First Councillor—"Here's a fine looking corpse!"

Second Ditto—"You're right! What's the best thing to do with it?"

"Let's have it dug up to lay a drain."

"But wouldn't it be proper to pave it first?"

"Of course; I thought you would understand that! Then, after it is paved and a drain put in, we'll have it repaved."

"All in readiness to be dug up again for laying the gas pipe? I see you understand the principles of municipal economy. And after we have had it paved for the second time, then what?"

"Well, then it will be ready for widening!"

What Happened to Jane

She Finds That Her Housekeeper, Mary Baird, Has a Love for Children.

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

CHAPTER I.

Copyright, 1916, Star Company.

THE few words about children brought nearer together the two women so unlike in character. It was less than a week after the conversation just recorded that, without warning, Mary spoke of something over which she had evidently been brooding.

"You like children, you said," she remarked. "Would you be glad to have one of your own?"

Jane flushed hotly. Mary had never asked her as direct a question as this before, and it confused her strangely. For the young wife had not let herself think much of this matter.

"I—I—don't know, Mary," she stammered. "If I had a child, of course I would love it—but I would not be sorry not to have one."

"Sometimes they're blessings, sometimes they're—not," Mary affirmed.

"That's true. But whatever they are, their mothers love them," Jane mused aloud. She felt at ease again. The question had evidently been put in an impersonal way. "Yes," she added, "if I had a child I'd love it—no matter what it was. Wouldn't you, Mary?"

"I'd love it so that I could die for it!" the other murmured. As on a former occasion when this subject was broached, Jane saw a strange look come to the black eyes. Was it the Indian in this woman that made her so vehement when motherhood was mentioned? Were the Indians especially devoted mothers?

WOULD DIE FOR HIM

The wonder made her ask an odd question: "Would you really die for a child, I wonder, Mary, if he was not all you hoped he would be?"

"Yes," declared the other fiercely. "I'd die for him, if it would help; I'd even kill for him if necessary, if his life and his good depended on it!"

The words were not terrifying, but as she listened to them the young woman felt a subtle chill as if in the presence of some sinister and fearful influence—as one might feel, she thought timidly, in a house one knew was haunted—if one believed in ghosts.

Afterward, when Jane reviewed these circumstances, it seemed a remarkable coincidence that only the next day a letter came for Mary Baird that left little room for doubt that even such seem too remarkable to be true.

Jane had brought the mail from the village postoffice. There was nothing for Jane, so she did not see the letters. But as she sat quietly reading, she fancied there came a sound of muffled sobbing from the room at the end of the hall. That was Mary's room, and Jane recalled now that she had heard the housekeeper come upstairs some minutes ago, but had not given the matter a second thought.

Hurrying down the hall, Jane knocked at the closed door. There was a rustling of paper, then Mary appeared at the door. Her face was haggard and her eyes rimmed with red.

Jane spoke gently. "I don't want to worry you," she said, "but have you had bad news?"

The thin lips twitched. "Yes," Mary murmured. "I've heard of the illness of—of—a—a person I'm interested in."

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" The exclamation was sincere and fraught with sympathy. It brought the tears to the keen eyes.

"But don't you want to go away for a day and see—that person?" Jane suggested. "If so, I will be glad to do your work."

"He wouldn't let me go," Mary whispered.

"Oh, I'm sure he will!" Jane exclaimed. For the moment her pity rendered her oblivious to the fact that her husband's sympathies were not as tender as hers. "Ask him—and I will do all I can to persuade him to send you."

"I've got to go—I've got to!" Mary's intensity of anguish swept away prudence and the discretion that had made her lower her voice just now, and she spoke loudly. "Whether he says I can or not—I must!"

She stopped with a gasp.

STOPS WITH A GASP.

The room in whose doorway the two women were standing was at the head of the stairs. A slight sound made them both turn. On the top landing stood Augustus Reeves. As Mary, overwrought and nervous, met his angry glare fixed upon her, she uttered a faint scream.

With a bound, the man cleared the space between himself and her.

"You ——!" he burst forth, hurling a vile epithet at the startled creature. "So you've been telling my wife, have you? I heard you! Am I heard her say that when I knew what you'd told her I'd—I'm—unfit—intolerable—and pale and wheeling upon the girl—"it's an infernal lie, everything she's said —a lie, I tell you! She's a liar, and she's a bad one through and through! Hardly good don't begin to her!"

"August Reeves!" The woman who for an instant had cowered under his tongue-lashing, now faced him fearlessly, her voice ringing out as if in command. "Be quiet, for God's sake, unless you want to ruin yourself! Mr. Heaton, I have not told her a word —no a word!"

A Visitor Gives Ideas on the Vagaries of Genius.

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THERE was a song riter & his wife up to the house last nite, thay was kind of stuck up, he was mear stuck up than his wife.

What a charming apartment you have' sed his wife to Ma. I supposs you must get it awful reasonable in this naborhood.

We like the naborhood very much, sed Ma. Sum very dear frends of ours live rite round here.

I dare say, sed the lady. But excuse me the pul-sing life every time.

I was telling Ed the other nite that one has to live in the white lite to rite the immortal things which will last forever, like a song "That Billowy, Willowy Bag."

I can rite, I sed.

Littel children shud be seen & not herd, she sed to me. Are you think of our new school of song riters, she asked Ma.

I dount know, sed Ma. Did they go to skool?

You dount understand me, she told Ma. I mean the man who has got away from the old ballits & is writing new, novel songs that are enuff spice in them to make them interesting.

We ain't much on music out here, sed Ma. I never herd much spice in Annie Laurie.

Oh, these poky old songs, sed the lady. They are dead to me. Them swift times. The song riters must starve if thay rote that kind of junk they used to.

Well, sed Ma, I wud rather starve than to write what I do not mean.

I rote a song myself last month, sed Pa. None of the publishers has been around to see me about it, but sum day I will prably put it on the market. The name of the song is "Why Look Sad, Mary, on the Morn'?"

I dount like the title at all, she sed to Pa. It suggests common pepsut that have paralysis in husband doesn't have to look sad every week, thank goodness.

Thank goodness my husband does git one every week, sed Pa. I think it must be nice to study the Nashun's songs, but I notice that all the trade pepsul in our naborhood are most polite to my husband than if he rote "Believe Me If All Them Endearing Yung Charms." I think Mister Schultz, our worthy butcher, sed Ya, thinks mear of ten-spots than he does of triolets.

I supposs so, sed the lady. One sumtimes finds it hard to understand the menial workings of the masses. Were you ever up the cup of tea genyus as long as I have, one naterally gits out of touch with the common things of life. One starts, as I did, in a hollow deer will you pleese sing yure latest hit?

& then her husband sang:

What is life to a beer?
O no vary clear,
O no vary queer,
O no vary dear, That willowy rag,
That willowy rag!
Dance me all around the hall,
Hold me tite so I won't fall,
Isn't this the grandest ball?
Baby, don't you understand?
Honey, ain't the music grand?
O that willowy rag!
O that billowy rag!

The sentiment is divine, sed Ma. If Shakespere wasent dead I wud say he rote it.

It is awfully sweet of you to say that, sed the riter's wife.

You see, sed Ma, we shud never speek ill of the ded.

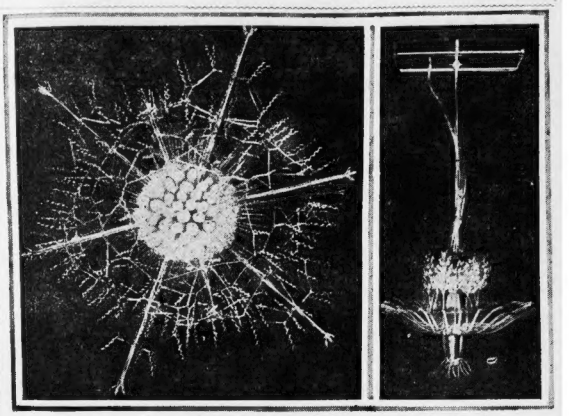
The Wonders of Crystal Animals

Models of Lowest Forms of Life Show Marvellous Beauties of Structure and Color



Two forms of lower animal life enlarged 200 times and reproduced in glass.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THE visitor wandering through the halls and alcoves of the American Museum of Natural History in New York will occasionally see a stray sunbeam bursting into a splash of many-colored fire where it falls upon a case filled with what looks like an exhibition of Venetian glass jewelry.

These crystal shapes, often of marvelous complexity, and tinted with the most delicate harmonic colors, represent some of the most singular animal inhabitants of our globe. Although at the bottom of the scale of organic life they yield to none of the higher forms in the elements of pure beauty.

They are called protozoa, or protozoans (Greek—proton, first, and zoon, animal), and they consist either of a single living cell, or of a group, or colony, of such cells. Most of them are very small, and some of the models in the museum are magnified more than a thousand diameters, so that the visitor is virtually provided with magic eyes which enable him to look down into the heart of a world of life where a drop of water may enshrine a metropolis.

Those who are moved by the beauty of that microscopic world may feel a shock when told that out of it issue some of the deadliest enemies of humanity, almost invisible agents of diseases which laugh to scorn the strongest defences that man's intelligence can erect against them.

The natural home of the protozoans is water. Billions live in swamps and stagnant pools, and countless multitudes in sea water. The bottom of the ocean, in places, is carpeted with their remains.

There is something very wonderful in their manner of living. They seize, devour and assimilate their food without possessing any of the organs employed for such purposes by higher animals.

"The protozoa," says Professor H. B. Ward, "manifest a physiological complexity as striking as their structural simplicity, in that all the functions of higher organisms are here discharged by the single cell.

"In the place of the tissues and organs of the higher animals one finds differentiations within the single cell which are related to special functions and hence analogous to organs."

The life forces which determine their forms seem to act along the lines of those which shape molecules into crystals. Many of them, as the accompanying pictures show, really resemble complicated crystals. This is strikingly true of the species called radiolarians.

There is a great variety of size among the different kinds of protozoans, and it is very interesting to reflect that if they could view one another as we larger animals view our contemporaries, the smaller species might feel as great a terror in the presence of some huge glittering, jointed crystal seeking its prey as a flock of lambs experience on the approach of a wolf.

It must not be supposed that the glass models in the museum are fanciful or imaginary representations of these minute creatures. The models are blown from glass, and built up and colored, in faithful imitation of the originals seen under the microscope, and the art of creating such models is a fine development of special skill and knowledge, of which there are very few masters in the world.

Herman G. Mueller says in the Museum Journal that the calling of the glass-blower is an inheritance from antiquity, and that "the sons grow up to their father's trade and devote themselves from early youth to the acquisition of the all important feeling and skill."

The Egg-Fish.

Percival, swelling with pride at his own audacity, led the fair Prunella to a table in the corner of a restaurant. Though he had a spirit above his degree, he had never yet dared to enter quite such a "swell place"—to use his own words—before.

The waiter approached, and Percival looked at him with a serenity he did not feel. With nervous eyes he glanced up from the menu:

"Bring me, please, a dozen oysters!" he demanded, while Prunella looked at him in adoring admiration.

"Very sorry, sir," answered the waiter, "but we are out of all shellfish—except eggs."

"Ah, all!" said Percival, throwing down the lengthy menu. "Bring me two boiled eggs!"

Great Men at Forty

Some Examples from the Pages of History.

THE fact, recently pointed out, that old men have been the leading figures in the big war makes interesting a glance at the pages of history.

General Grant was strongly opposed to any man commanding in the field after 60. Julius Cæsar and his encircled Rome and her seven hills with a wall, supernaturally his warriors, according to Montaigne, at forty-seven. Augustus dictated them at forty-five, and Britain does not appoint them to supreme command until they are approaching sixty.

Sir John French is sixty-three, Sir Ian Hamilton, just home from the Dardanelles, will be sixty-three in January. His successor, Sir Charles Monro, is fifty-five. Admiral Jellico is fifty-six. Sir Percy Scott is sixty-two. Lord Kitchener himself is sixty-five.

All entered the service early, as did most of their great predecessors, but their predecessors won fame earlier in life.

Rodney and Hood entered the navy at thirteen and seventeen respectively, while Nelson joined his ship at twelve, and was lieutenant at nineteen. Wellington entered the army at eighteen; Napoleon, his great antagonist, born in the same year, was already an officer of artillery two years earlier.

But all these men had distinguished themselves in arms, or that their fame was universal, by the time they were forty.

Rodney, for example, was made Governor of Newfoundland at twenty-nine, and was Rear Admiral eleven years later. Nelson was but thirty-eight when he defeated the Spaniards at Cape St. Vincent, forty when he won Aboukir Bay and forty-seven when he so gloriously died.

Both Wellington and Napoleon were youthful giants. The latter had raised himself to Emperor at five-and-thirty. As for the victor of Waterloo, who was then but forty-six, he had done the lion's share in the overthrow of Tippoo Sahib when thirty, and won his suzerainty when thirty-three. Sir Francis Drake was only forty-eight when he and the favoring winds put the Armada to flight.

Turning to civil life the same phenomenon confronts us. Pope Innocent III. was thirty-seven when he became supreme ruler in Christendom. Ignatius Loyola and John Wesley worked with young brains. The former was but thirty when he wrote his famous "Spiritual Exercises." Blaise Pascal, at sixteen, gave the world new treatises on conic sections that dated a new departure in their treatment. Grotius was practising law at seventeen, and was Attorney-General at twenty-four.

At twenty-six Keats, the poet, died, having given us "Endymion" at twenty-three, followed by some of the noblest sonnets in the English language. Byron was barely a man when "English Bards and Scotch Reviewers" flashed from his caustic pen and laid the foundation of a name that, with only six-and-thirty years to gather glory in, made itself imperishable.

What young giants trod the political stage in the eighteenth century. Both Bolingbroke and Pitt were Ministers of the Crown before they had reached the age of five-and-twenty, the other Chancellor of the Exchequer at twenty-three, and, at twenty-five, one of the most powerful Ministers England has ever had.

That youth, not age, is the time for achievement is clear from the fact that death seems to have been unusually busy among great men who have attained to fifty. At fifty-one died Tasso, Sir Humphrey Davy, Cavour and Madame de Staël; at fifty-two, Napoleon, Shakespeare, Sue, Gordon, Hamlet, Lessing, Alexander the Great; at fifty-four, Descartes, Drake, Marryat, Danton, Pope, Julius Cæsar and Paganini all died at fifty-six. At fifty-seven, Andrew Marvell and Richard Steele, Oliver Cromwell and Lord Macaulay were still in the fifties when they died.

Nor must it be forgotten that middle life is morally more perilous than youth. Great as are the temptations of young manhood, the pupils that lie in wait for us in the midst of the years are deadlier. More men go wrong between forty and fifty than in early manhood, even as more ships founder upon the high seas than go down when sailing out of port.

Cambridge Lady Underwent Wonderful Experience with Remedy, Plant Juice.

The question of combating the modern scourge of kidney disease, with each trouble, with its attending illness and kidney trouble and rheumatism—has been solved by Plant Juice, a herbal system tonic. Plant Juice, a remedy that not only eradicates the disease, but also builds up the whole system, purifies the blood and makes one realize that life is really worth living.

As the days pass by more and more people are coming to realize the truth of the statement, as is attested by the signed testimonials of well-known local people. Recently Mrs. G. W. Lang, No. 7 Fairwood Circle, Cambridge, who is well known in social circles, stated:

"I have suffered with stomach trouble for over 25 years. I could not digest my food and it would ferment in my stomach, causing me at times great distress after eating, and my stomach was all bloated. I was told that I had an acid stomach. I had headaches, was dizzy and could not sleep at night, and had a burning feeling in the pit of my stomach, so bad that I was afraid to sit down to the table to eat anything as it caused me such agony. I have taken all kinds of medicine which did me no good whatever, and it was only when I started to take your medicine, Plant Juice, that I got any relief. A friend of mine who had been cured of a bad case of stomach trouble told me what a wonderful remedy it was, and it has certainly been wonderful in my case, as it has relieved my stomach. I can eat any kind of food and am feeling like a new woman. I am glad to recommend Plant Juice."

The Plant Juice Man is at the Liggett Drug Co.'s store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

AL REICH A HUSKY YOUTH

Former Amateur Star, Who Meets Levinsky at Hip Tomorrow, Owner of Kayo Wallop.

It will be "Battling" Levinsky vs. Al Reich in the chief combat at the Hippodrome tomorrow night.

For Levinsky it will be his third Boston appearance. During the Summer he galloped in a twelve-rounder with Master "Sandy" Ferguson, while a few weeks ago he bagged a close one from Tom Cowler after getting off to a miserably bad start.

The first round was Cowler's, while in the second Jim Corbett's protege floored Levinsky cleanly. Were the Battler an "green" as Tom he would have got his good; in fact, the show would probably have been over in the aforesaid second chapter. But Levinsky stalled his way along until he got his bearings. He clearly outboxed and outgeneraled Cowler from the fourth round on to the close and owned quite a pudgy margin when the curtain descended on their number.

REICH OLD AMATEUR KING.

Reich makes his Boston bow tomorrow night. Rather, he is to go on in his first local professional battle. The national heavyweight champion for two years, Al showed in Boston when mingling with the simonpures. He proved himself quite a gladiator, it being freely numbered at the time that he was bound to be hitting it up with the professionals before he got very much further advanced with the game.

Since turning professional, Reich has engaged in twenty-five battles and captured seventeen of them via the kayo route. Incidentally, he was racked to sleep twice himself. Early in his career. In fact, in his second bout with the paid brigade, he was knocked silly by Carl Morris in the second round of their encounter.

Last May Jim Coffey flattened Reich in the third round of their scrap in New York. Many critics stated this meant the last of Al.

PULLS A COMEBACK.

Instead, it simply started to get the big fellow going again, as he came back by knocking out "Sailor" Fritts, whoever he is; Arthur Pelky, Al Norton, "Sailor" Carroll, Al McCloskey and Frank Hagney and going the full distance with Jim Flynn and "Gunboat" Smith.

Lippe is very strong for Reich. So is the Armory A. A.'s demon press agent. To the former amateur's credit it can be said he has all the necessary dimentions going to make up the successful heavyweight; is a clean liver and good trainer; a graceful hitter; light on his feet and has a good eye for distance.

All of which is boosting him pretty highly. Al's height is 6 feet 2 inches and he weighs around 200.

No, Levinsky and Reich have not battled before.

EXETER PICKS TEAM FOR B. A. A. GAMES

Exeter, N. H., Jan. 24.— Coach George S. Conners has picked Exeter's team for competition in the B. A. A. games February 5. The relay to run against Andover will be comprised of Shannon, Williams, Buchsbaum and Akhai. A. V. Weiner of Everett and Garvin Rawden are the extra men in this event. Abner Haskell will run in the 600-yard run, Captain Walcen will start in the 1000-yard event, and Walter Whalen, who is jumping close to six feet, will enter the high jump. "Red" Dana of Canton, Mass., won the trials in the 40-yard dash for the school boy games, February 25. F. F. Williams was second and D. Hamilton third.

PHILLIES PUT IN A CLAIM FOR GEDEON

Philadelphia, Jan. 24.—President William F. Baker of the Phillies will protest the sale of Second Baseman Joe Gedeon, formerly of Salt Lake (Pacific Coast League) team and who accepted Federal League inducements near the close of the 1915 pennant fight. Gedeon was sold to the Yankees last Friday by Harry F. Sinclair.

In discussing the matter, Baker said: "Donovan has taken from the line of the Phillies a fish that does not belong to him. We had a prior claim to Gedeon before he ever cast his lot with the Federals.

"I am surprised that Sinclair should sell him to the Yankees. As a matter of fact, I think the Phillies have such a good claim to Gedeon we are going to appeal to the National Commission to have him turned over to us."

WILLIAMS ISSUES ITS DATES ON TRACK

Williamstown, Jan. 24.—The Williams College track schedule for the coming season, which has just been announced by the management, consists of two relay races and two dual meets. Williams will also compete in the annual New England I. C. A. A. meet. The annual interscholastic meet for Berkshire County schools will be held in Williamstown on May 2. The schedule:

February [illegible] relay with Brown at B. A. A. meet, Boston; February [illegible] relay with Amherst at Springfield Naval Training Station; May 6 dual meet with Amherst, Pratt Field; May 13, dual meet with Wesleyan, Weston Field; May 20 and 21, New England I. C. A. A. meet (place undecided).

New York, Jan. 24.—Alexander Aberg, world's champion Graeco-Roman wrestler, and Wladek Zbyszko wrestle to a finish at the Manhattan Opera House tonight. Aberg threw Zbyszko at Madison Square Garden last September for the first time Wladek was ever pinned to the mat. Previously Zbyszko held Aberg to a draw in a gruelling four-hour contest.

BROOKS ON WITH MALONE

New Bedford, Jan. 24.— Terry Brooks, the Cambridge lightweight, who rules New Bedford's present ring idol, meets Joe Malone of New York in the ten-round wind-up event at the New Bedford A. C. tonight. Brooks is 4 to 5 favorite in the betting.

RAILROAD HEADS PLAN FIGHT ON 8-HOUR STRIKE

New York, Jan. 24.—Railroad managers of this country who have been closely following the developments in the eight-hour movement among their employes are not cherishing any illusions regarding the result if the referendum now being taken among the members of the four big railroad unions on the question of whether the demand shall be made.

Within the last week they have received reports showing that the voting generally is overwhelmingly in favor of making the demand.

To meet the situation which the railroad executives believe is to be presented to them early in March, steps have already been taken to launch the biggest publicity campaign ever conducted in a labor dispute.

This publicity campaign is to show the lines of the one hundred to both the Eastern and Western roads in the recent freight rate decision before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

In the Eastern district the railroads have already organized their committee with Elisha Lee of the Pennsylvania as chairman. Mr. Lee has had charge of the railroads' side in all the recent wage controversies.

The railroads are convinced that they are facing a monster demand. The railroad payroll now approaches $1,500,000,000 a year for the great army of nearly 2,100,000 men.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular in New York at the opening with coppers strong, railroads weak and war industrials mixed. After the first changes and rather quiet as a class. U. S. Industrial Alcohol was the most active issue in early trading, opening with a two-point gain, quickly receding that much and a fraction more before advancing three points. U. S. Steel began a shade higher and then receded a trifle. Amendola was the strongest and most active copper. Sentiment remained about the same as at the week-end. Traders and outsiders were awaiting the Friday dividend tomorrow by U. S. Steel directors upon the common dividend. There is the almost uncertainty as to what their action will be. The Wall Street Journal this morning was attributed to resumption of foreign selling. In many quarters it is claimed Europeans are selling more because of the belief that the railway shares is curtailed by belief of many prospective investors that the time is now ripe to get out and send them to a lower level before the rapidly developed plan of the railroad as a whole the price trend during the first half year was downward. Before the end of the first hour the market was weak. Selling centered on rails and U. S. Steel increased.

PRICE CHANGES RULED SMALL.

Price changes ruled small around the start, but were larger as compared with recent days. The railroad payroll now approaches $1,500,000,000 a year for the great army of nearly 2,100,000 men.

BANK CLEARINGS INCREASE.

Bank clearings are supposed to testify accurately to business conditions and to be as significant of the rise and fall of trade as any statistical information that can be gathered. They are, in short, the pulsation of commerce. Nothing for months past has been more encouraging than the steady increase in clearings.

The compilation by Dun's Review of returns from all the important cities in the country for the last banking week gives the total clearings as $2,867,666,234, an increase of 43.4 per cent, compared with the corresponding period last year.

As to clearings in Boston, New York, Chicago and four other leading cities the Commercial and Financial Chronicle gives returns for 1915 and 1916 weeks as follows:

	1915	1916	Inc
New York	$2,256,403,027	$1,562,783	56.2%
Chicago	252,756,331	215,351,689	13.8
Boston	178,526,000	145,787,000	22.5
Philadelphia	182,621,802	128,972,695	46.7
St. Louis	59,000,000	49,000,000	20.4
Baltimore	34,470,004	29,047,215	22.2
New Orleans	19,000,000	16,000,000	18.3

AFTER USURIOUS BANKERS.

John Skelton Williams, Comptroller of the currency, has issued a circular letter of instruction which will impose prison sentences upon national bank officials who violate the usury laws hereafter. He also says he is considering action which will avoid the effects of the additional banks which are persistent offenders in this respect.

It is said that Washington officials to paint Wall Street and other Eastern bankers as the biggest sharks in the financial sea but when it comes to usury Mr. Williams, a Virginian, says the worst offenders are in the South and Middle West country banks, according to him, are worse than big city institutions.

"Some banks," he said, "have admitted under oath that they were charging not 100 per cent. but 500 and 1,000 per cent. in some cases. One national bank had an average rate of 25 per cent. on all loans.

"Last December I required all banks to submit a statement of all their loans above 6 per cent. The record shows that on some small loans as high as 2,000 per cent is being charged. I have no authority except to bring suit for the annulment of a bank's charter.

"The Department of Justice should be authorized to proceed against the usurer and the borrower should not be required to bring suit. As the law stands, the borrower m... sue on usurious charges, but no borrower is going to do this because by so doing he may be blacklisted and he may want to borrow again."

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

To get prompt shipments from manufacturers some consumers are now paying as much as 25c a pound premium upon steel products. Nothing more plainly indicates how the capacity of steel plants is now taxed to fill orders.

For December the net sales of companies whose shares are owned by the Massachusetts Light Companies increased $8,434 comparatively and the gain for the six months ended December 28 was $21,669.

When the American Woolen Company transfers its charter from New Jersey to this State the Commonwealth of Massachusetts will receive a fee of $30,000 for the issuance of the certificate of incorporation. The American Woolen Company has been paying Massachusetts an excise tax of $8,000 a year as a foreign corporation.

"BIG BUSINESS" SEEKS IDEAL CANDIDATE

By B. C. FORBES.

New York, Jan. 24.—The presidential campaign is not to be allowed to upset business.

Financial and industrial leaders have agreed upon that decree.

After the international cataclysm of 1914-1916 an ordinary, orderly political election does not frighten.

Nothing else now being talked over in high financial circles, but so far only in an informal, disjointed way.

Distinct differences of opinion exist in the most influential circles.

Republican magnates feel that no great harm would result were President Wilson re-elected, since he has demonstrated his readiness to aid in upbuilding the country's industrial prosperity.

Others hold that public sentiment is now largely anti-administration, and that a united Republican-Progressive party could easily defeat a divided Wilson-Bryan party.

A great gathering of "big business" men will be held at New York during the second half of this week, and political questions undoubtedly will be discussed privately, rather than publicly.

Justice Hughes has not many warm friends in the most powerful business interests.

A Middle Western man of large affairs, a man of proved ability in organization, a strong character, a man who would appeal to the working forces of the country, employes as well as employers, is looked upon as an ideal candidate.

His name has been yet agreed upon, however.

New "records" are being established, financially and industrially. Thus:

Our United States holds a record amount of gold.

Our American banks are carrying a record amount of surplus reserve.

Bank loans are of record volume.

Our record-expanding facilities are of record extent.

Our agricultural products have been of record value.

Our foreign trade is of record volume.

Bank clearings are breaking the best records of previous boom times.

Railroad earnings are reaching new high records.

Iron and steel output is at a record level.

Other industries are announcing new records.

Wages are rising to a record height.

And the security markets are declining information indefinitely.

The cause? Chiefly the inevitable reaction in war stocks, which were recklessly over-boomed.

There is a rank due to the United States among nations which will be withheld, if not absolutely lost, by the reputation of weakness. If we desire to avoid insult, we must be able to repel it; if we desire to secure peace, one of the most powerful instruments of our rising prosperity, it must be known that we are at all times ready for war.—GEORGE WASHINGTON

Another Example of Democratic Futility

SENATOR HOKE SMITH is anxious patriotically to protect American shipping from illegal seizure and confiscation by belligerents across the Atlantic.

Senator Smith proposes that we cease supplying arms and munitions and foodstuffs to any nation which refuses to recognize the rights of our neutral commerce.

As things stand, this means that either the British Admiralty must order British naval commanders to cease their illegal seizure of American ships or else go without American war supplies and foodstuffs.

There is no threat of war now, nor is any intended. The sole proposal is that we use our natural right to trade or not to trade with England as a peaceable means of compelling England to observe the rules of international law in the treatment of our neutral commerce.

Senator Williams—speaking for himself and the administration—adduced several reasons why our government should not try to protect American shipping by active measures. They are:

1. That Mr. Williams refuses to put mere dollars above human life;

2. That German submarines have sunk British ships and caused the deaths of American citizens voyaging on those ships;

3. That "unless the allies are curs and cowards they would not respect the ukase of a government which has only 90,000 soldiers and a fourth-rate navy"; and

4. That Mr. Williams—still speaking for the administration as well as himself—wants the allies to win.

We must confess that our feebler intellect is wholly unable to comprehend the mental processes by which Mr. John Sharp Williams evolves such remarkable reasoning as this.

According to Mr. Williams, we have no right to protect our neutral commerce from seizure and spoliation by warships of England because a German submarine sank the Lusitania. Ergo, if the Japanese navy should seize the Panama Canal, it would be wrong for us to try to resist Japan because the Mexicans the other day murdered nineteen American citizens.

Also, we ought not to make resistance, because the Panama Canal is only property, and some of our soldiers would be killed in fighting over its possession—thus putting "mere dollars above human life."

Also, the Japanese, having a navy as strong as ours and a trained army of 2,500,000 men, would not, "unless they were curs and cowards, respect the ukase of a government with only 90,000 soldiers and a fourth-rate navy."

And, to complete the analogy, Japan is one of the allies, and Mr. John Sharp Williams—speaking for the administration—wants the allies to WIN.

There was a time when Mississippi sent men to the United States Senate who would not have made themselves ridiculous by such more than ridiculous reasoning.

It would seem that even a very mediocre mind ought to be able to perceive that what GERMANY may or may not have done in violation of our international rights has no possible connection with what the BRITISH GOVERNMENT may or may not have done in violation of those same rights.

The question of protecting American rights on the high seas is not a question to be considered either from a pro-ally or a pro-Teuton standpoint.

It is a question to be considered wholly from a PRO-AMERICAN standpoint.

We have demanded respect for our rights from Germany and Austria, and Germany and Austria have yielded to the extreme length of abandoning their most effective means of naval warfare upon British commerce.

We should now, in decency and self-respect, demand that the allies respect our rights and use the powerful weapon of non-intercourse to compel them to do so.

As to Mr. Williams' threat that his foreign friends would not submit, "like cowards and curs," to an assertion of our rights because our army and navy are weak, we can only say that it is the basest and meanest sentiment yet uttered by any member of a Democratic faction which has been singularly prolific of mean and base sentiments.

Reduced to its logical, shameful last analysis, this declaration can mean only that the administration sharply maintained our rights against Germany and Austria because those powers could not get at us with an army or fleet and must NOT sharply maintain our rights against the allies because they CAN get at us with armies and fleets.

We feel confident that not even William J. Bryan can excel the cowardly meanness of that sentiment.

Citizens, did we not say to you that the only possible way left to reinstate the republic in a position of honor and respect is to sweep the Capitol clean of these unpatriotic, un-American and hopelessly incompetent Democratic misrepresentatives?

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

Modern Warfare!

LET murderous mobs of marauders beware!
Let bandits and cut-throats and thugs have a care!
Our pencils are sharpened, our pads are at hand;
The pen's in the holder, the ink's in the stand.
Our lexicon lies, neatly opened, before us,
And well within reach is our tattered thesaurus.
And soon there shall thrill on the midwinter breeze
The ominous click of the typewriter keys!

NO wonder old generals, seasoned in war,
Are saying such things as they ne'er said before!
No wonder that diplomats suddenly pale
When they once get a look at the outgoing mail!
No wonder our enemies flee for their lives,
Like hunted wild beasts, when the mail train arrives!
But vengeance will soon have them all by the throats—
Just wait till they read those nerve-shattering notes!

GEORGE WASHINGTON fought in the old-fashioned way;
He grabbed up a musket and rushed to the fray.
They never had heard in those futile old days
Of the terrible force of rhetorical phrase.
Paul Jones never dreamed, 'mid the sea battles' din,
Of calling a trusty stenographer in
And dictating notes; but our statesmen are prouder
Than Jones was and never waste half so much powder.
Our method's the better, we're free to assert;
It may get us sneers—but we never get hurt!

Happiness in Simplicity

Woman Will Never Realize Her Ideal, Says Dorothy Dix, Until, Like Man, She Ceases to Think of Happiness as a Complex Thing and Learns to Make the Most of the Moment.

By Dorothy Dix

ONE of the curious differences between men and women is the fact that it takes so much more to make a woman happy than it does a man. It was a masculine poet, you recall, who, speaking for his sex, declared that "Man wants but little here below, nor wants that little long." No one, not even a poet, would be rash enough to make such a claim for woman. She wants the earth, and the fullness thereof. Nothing less will satisfy her. And she wants it forever.

Man's happiness is generally simple. Woman's is the most complex thing on earth, and this peculiarity of the two sexes manifests itself at every turn. Take, for instance, such a common thing as a good dinner. How very seldom do you ever see a woman enjoying one with the frank delight of a man? He abandons himself to the pleasure of the moment.

Yesterday he may have dined off an adamantine ham sandwich, next week he may be glad to get pork and beans; but today he is reveling in all there is of present luxury, enjoying to the fullest the daintiness of the service, the fine flavor of the viands, the bouquet of the wines.

A woman, on the other hand, finds it impossible to enjoy anything without reserve. If she is eating turtle soup and terrapin, she spoils it by dreading some possible future time, when she may have nothing but corned beef and cabbage, and if she can find no other skeleton to sit beside her at the feast she can always conjure up the dread spectre of dyspepsia to threaten her with unmentionable tortures at every mouthful.

Another pertinent illustration of how many more things it takes to make a woman happy than it does a man is afforded by the sorry spectacle we see every day of the new rich trying to buy themselves into society.

When a plain man accumulates a fortune by hard work and thrift it generally leaves him with simple ideas of enjoying it.

He wants a good, comfortable house, a good automobile, the best to eat and drink; but he wants to stay in his old neighborhood, among the people he has lived with and liked for years.

But his wife's ideas are diametrically opposite. She feels that mere money is dust and ashes, unless she can purchase a place in that society that begins with a big S. She decides on the exodus, and leads the march away from the old home and the old friends up into that frigid zone of fashion where she never gets acclimated and lives in a perpetual frost.

Even in the inner life, this different way of looking at happiness still holds true. A man accepts happiness when it comes to him simply and without question. A woman turns it and tests it to see if it is really genuine, and she isn't being taken in by a counterfeit.

She will never realize her ideal, though, until she ceases to think of happiness as a complex thing. Life isn't a circus, and there is no great aggregation of circumstances that may be rolled on to bring pleasure. True happiness consists in learning to enjoy simple things, and to make the most of the moment.

Fighting the Grip

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects.

PART ONE.

THE popular and hereditary dread of wet feet in grip times is probably much exaggerated. Almost the only harm of wet feet is the chill that comes afterward from standing about in the open or sitting in poorly heated rooms and on cold floors in wet shoes and stockings.

They were something of a menace to health in the days when crossings and even sidewalks were ankle deep in mud and slush, and houses and business buildings were poorly heated by stoves and grates and open fires, and floors were always cold and hallways and stairways of an Arctic frigidity. But since the introduction of furnace and steam heat, with warm floors everywhere, half if not two-thirds of their dangers has vanished into thin air. Don't get your shoes wet through if you can help it, but if you do, don't worry.

Put your feet on or near the radiator for fifteen of twenty minutes so as to get them warmed well through and then sit where you can keep them warm and you will catch neither rheumatism, pneumonia, nor your death of cold, unless you are slated for a blow-up, which won't be once in ten times.

If you go home the best thing is to put on dry socks at once, and it is a wise thing to have in your office a warm, comfortable, fairly presentable pair of slippers, which you can slip on while your shoes are drying by the radiator. But, broadly speaking, wet feet will do no harm nine times out of ten so long as they stay warm, whether that warmth comes from fast walking or from hot steam pipes.

The fear of wet feet, which has been so fiercely preached into us from our nursery days, like most artificial phobias, does us far more harm than good by frightening us out of many a vigorous, wholesome walk and keeping us prisoners indoors whenever it is a little sloppy under foot or looks like rain.

Remember that we were amphibious for at least a million years, and a little cold water will do our skin no more harm than it would a frog's. You may get your feet wet as often as you like with impunity, so long as you change or start moving again the moment they begin to feel clammy.

Cold weather, as such, or storms, have nothing whatever to do with the grip. In fact, it is notorious that the worst epidemics and the most rapid spread of the disease occur during spells of mild, soft Winter weather, or just after a marked rise in the temperature, and some sanitarians have gone so far as to declare that a blizzard stops its spread.

The only reason why grip epidemics and colds and pneumonia occur in the Winter time is that we let the cold weather drive us indoors and keep us there, stewing in each other's breath, like bees in a hive, and thus furnish the germs ideal hothouse conditions for incubating up to the proper pitch of virulence and then spreading beautifully.
